We are persistent in our claims that you can do better at our store than anywhere else.

The why is easily answered.

1. Our big store is conducted by an economical organization. We are not subject to high rentals—our expenses being only nominal.

2. Our connections in the East secure us every possible advantage—we are members of one of the largest purchasing companies in New York, an organization composed of the most prominent handlers of Floor Coverings in the United States.

3. Our large outlet makes it easy to quote lowest prices and our steadfast policy to exclude inferior goods from our stocks make trading here

Redfern Corsets

Are exceedingly graceful models, rounding where necessary and giving beauty of outline. Genuine whalebones are used in their construction, which accounts for the freedom of movement allowed and the ease in wear, no matter how tightly laced the garment may be. The selected Arctic whalebone with which they are fitted is always resilient. The metal parts of the corset and the hose supporters are rust proof, guaranteed so, and the supporters used are the Security Rubber button kind. We are showing many models that range in price from $3.00 To $8.00 Pair.

CHRISTMAS STAMPS.

PACKAGE CONTAINING 500,000 ARRIVES IN LOUISVILLE.

Committee in Charge of Distribution Meets Some Time This Week To Perfect Plans.

Louisville is expected to use 500,000 Christmas stamps during the approaching holidays. They arrived yesterday, making a package that required the strength of two heavy expressmen to handle. The stamps were delivered at the headquarters of the Louisville Anti-Tuberculosis Association, 121 Park.

West Chestnut street. They will be held there until the distribution begins, which will probably be about December 1. Louisville used about 500,000 of the holiday stickers last year, and the consumption this time is expected to be considerably larger. The half-million commitment will likely be enough to make care of the major part of the sale period, but arrangements have been made to secure additional supplies without delay. No one will be seriously disappointed if the sale reaches 1,000,000. Secretary F. A. Sampson, of the tuberculosis organization, did some interesting yesterday that brought out some interesting facts about the stamps. Here are some of the results: Placed side by side, the stamps would extend a distance of nearly eight miles, or from the filter plant to Shawnee Park.

Placed one on top of the other they would rise to a height of 300 feet, so that if the Columbia, Aetherton, Paul Jones and Todd buildings were placed on top of each other their combined height would hardly be as great as that of the stamps. Testing the weight of every piece of mail that bears a Christmas stamp at two ounces, the combined weight of such mail leaving Louisville next month will be more than thirty-one tons. The area of the stamps, if placed flat on the ground, would be 1,500 square feet, enough to cover the floor of The Seebach lobby with a few to spare. The weight of the package containing the stamps is 300 pounds, and it is three feet wide, six feet long and two feet thick. The stamps are in sheets of 100, and boxes containing 10,000 each. After having impressed the importance and number of the stamps upon his hearer, Mr. Sampson announced that there will be a meeting of the Christmas stamp committee some time this week for the purpose of completing arrangements for their sale. LARGE DISTILLERY BURNED NEAR CINCINNATI. Cincinnati, Nov. 12.—The immense plant of the Union Distilling Company, known as the Edgemont Springs Distillery, at Carthage, a suburb of this city, was almost destroyed by fire early today. The loss is estimated at between $250,000 and $300,000, fully covered by insurance. There were numerous explosions during the progress of the fire, and in one of these William Theobald, a volunteer fireman, was seriously injured.

APPEAL TO FRIENDS FOR RAILROAD FARE.

Defendants in Contempt Cases At Chattanooga, Tenn., Without Funds. Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 12.—We are utterly without money and we call on our friends to contribute what they can to pay our railroad transportation to the city of Washington. The foregoing appeal was made today by William Mayes and Henry Padgett, two of the five codefendants who, with former Sheriff Shipps, have been found guilty of contempt of the United States Supreme Court and are under summons to appear before the court in Washington to receive sentence Monday. Attorney General Wickensham has notified United States Marshal W. A. Dunlap that the Government will not pay the fare of any of the defendants to Washington, and unless they appear in Washington Monday their bonds will be forfeited and they will be taken into custody. Jeremiah Gibson, Padgett and Mayes had made application to the Government for railroad fare. All the defendants want to leave for Washington Sunday morning. Any real estate hereabouts is salable—so it will pay to persevere in advertising it.

CAIRO SALOONS CLOSED TIGHT

No Dramshops Can Open Until Next Tuesday.

State's Attorney Hampered In Identifying Mob.

Mayor Says It Was Composed of Business Men.

NEGRO ALEXANDER LOCATED.

Cairo, Ill., Nov. 13.—With only three companies of militia on guard to-night, Cairo was more nearly in a normal state than it has been since the body of Annie Pelley was discovered in an alley last Tuesday morning. Except for the fact that the saloons are still closed and an occasional patrol of soldiery tramps through the streets, there are no surface indications that two nights ago the city was in the control of a well-organized mob with the authorities unable to prevent a double lynching.

Justice Meted Out.

Beneath the surface Cairo generally is still prone to congratulate itself that swift justice was meted out to two murderers. There is widespread opinion that "Froggy" James and Henry Salmer deserved their fates. At least, if there is any lingering doubt as to their guilt it is not expressed openly. This attitude of the public is hindering State's Attorney Williams and the other officials who are endeavoring to fix the responsibility for the lynchings. While it is not difficult to obtain identification of many individuals who were on the streets and close to the summary executions, it has thus far been impossible to unearth positive evidence regarding the leaders of the mob who took the negro from the custody of the Sheriff and who battered down the door of Salmer's cell.

Different Sections of Mob.

The State's Attorney said late today that he had been able to establish only the fact that a different set of men performed the work at the hanging and shooting of James. He evidenced this as proof of the systematic method followed by the lynchers, but said that all of these men had been careful to protect the secret of their identity. The investigations of the State's Attorney gave weight to a statement ascribed to Mayor Parsons, who told some of the militia commanders there was no riotous mob in Cairo. It was a gathering of business men.

Saloonkeepers Disappointed.

The most bitterly disappointed men in Cairo to-night are the saloonkeepers. Special excursion trains are to be run into this city to-morrow to accommodate the Sunday sightseers. It is expected that thousands of visitors will reach the city, but none of the money which they will bring in their pockets will be handled by the barkeepers.

The saloon men tried to pry the lid loose to-day and persuaded Mayor Parsons to request the Governor for an abrogation of the latter's order closing the bars. The Governor's answer stated merely that after a conference with Earl, Gen. Wells he was of the opinion that the saloons of Cairo should be kept closed until Tuesday, and so advise you. This called for the following proclamation by the Mayor:

Proclamation of Mayor.

"By request of the Governor of the State of Illinois, it is hereby ordered by me that all dramshops or saloons in the city of Cairo shall remain closed and shall not transact any business until Tuesday morning, November 16, 1939.

"The State militia will patrol the city for the purpose of reporting violation of this proclamation."

State's Attorney Wilson also brought the Governor into the situation by unearthing a statute, passed in 1905, and declaring it to be the duty of the Governor to proclaim the shirer of any county vacant when a prisoner is taken from the sheriff and lynched. The statute provides that the coroner shall succeed to the sheriff's duties and that the deceased official may regain his place by making a written defense to the Governor, Attorney General and State's Attorney within ten days of the lynching. Mr. Wilson construed the law as being mandatory on the Governor. It put into effect this statute would put the burden of sending an official report to the State executive squarely up to Sheriff Frank Davis. He was not prepared to-night

Salmer's Father May Bring Suit.

Although the rioting was accompanied by practically no destruction of property, Cairo may not escape a loss to its treasury. This will be limited to $5,000, however, and will be collected upon the determination of Henry Salmer's father to sue the city on behalf of the two orphaned children of the lynched man. The law gives the "opouse or lineal heirs" of mob victims an actionable claim against the municipality in which a lynching has deprived them of their natural support. "Froggy" James had no heirs of the class described by the statute, so no claim can be entered against the city because of his death.

Murder Investigation At Standstill.

Official activity regarding the murder of Miss Pelley is practically at a standstill. The investigators found that their best witnesses were Mrs. Catherine Cooper and Loving Green, the negroes, who were allowed to leave Cairo when it became apparent that they were in danger of mob violence. Until it will be possible to get further depositions from them, the Coroner's inquest over Miss Pelley will not be resumed, although attempts to establish a connection of Arthur Alexander with the crime will not be abandoned.

The deputy sheriffs who accompanied Alexander and his militia guard out of Cairo last night returned to-day. They announced that they had delivered their prisoner to the Sheriff of Champaign county, the arrangements for Alexander's incarceration in Kankakee having been changed at the last moment.

Woman Fires At Negro.

The first alarm that has reached militia headquarters came to-night when Mrs. E. D. Nellis, wife of the Assessor and Treasurer of Alexander county, fired several revolver shots at a negro whom neighbors had detected prowling about her home, less than a block from the courthouse. The shots brought a squad of guardsmen to the place on the double quick.

Mrs. Nellis was warned of the intruder's presence by telephone messages from women neighbors. She opened fire on the negro and he jumped over the back fence and escaped. None of the shots took effect.

To Erect Monument.

Cairo's week of tragedy and riot is to be commemorated by a monument, if the plans of certain citizens are carried out.

A scheme was broached to-day for the opening of a public subscription list to obtain funds for a shaft to be placed at the place where Annie Pelley was attacked last Monday night.

The men back of the movement are of considerable standing in the community. They assert that their idea is to perpetuate the memory of Miss Pelley and to provide a permanent

MAN WITH REVOLVER CAUSES EXCITEMENT

WEAPON IS DISCHARGED DURING DESPERATE STRUGGLE.

DETECTIVE STRALEY RECEIVES BLOW IN THE FACE.

PRISONER FINALLY LANDED.

A man who gave his name as Henry Vetter was arrested by patrolmen from Central police station last night after he ran amuck, it is alleged, at Second and Chestnut streets. According to police, Vetter accosted Sam Willis, a colored porter for Col. J. Durrett, about 10 o'clock last night and told him that he must proceed, out the street any farther. The frightened negro, believing that he was being threatened, called for help and ran away, leaving Vetter to fight alone. Vetter, it is alleged, forced him to stand against a telephone pole.

John M. Ferguson, a member of the Salvage Corps, seeing the predicament of the man, went to his rescue and grappled with Vetter. As soon as Willis was released he ran away, leaving Ferguson to fight alone. Vetter, it is alleged, forced him to stand against a telephone pole.

Just at a time when things seemed darkest for Ferguson, an East Broadway car came along and passengers, realizing the state of affairs, went to the rescue of Ferguson. W. H. V. Jones, a medical student who lives at 715 Locust street, and E. J. Fitzgerald, whose home is on the Cherokee road, were the first to reach him.

Vetter was seized by the three men, but he did not submit meekly. In the scuffle the revolver was discharged, but no one was wounded.

Believing that he had shot one of the men, Vetter fled down Chestnut street in an attempt to get away, but Patrolmen Collins and Wellman, seeing the crowd, laid a trap for him. "Stop that man," lay in wait around the corner. Vetter ran directly into their arms and was placed under arrest.

An automobile from Central police station, carrying Serge Francis, Corp. Hoy and Detective Jim Straley, was hurried to the scene, as a report had been spread that a riot was taking place. As Vetter was being placed in the machine he mistook Straley for one of the men with whom he had been fighting and struck him a blow in the face. The detective staggered, and then the man, realizing that he had made a mistake, apologized.

Vetter was charged with shooting at a peace officer and with carrying a dangerous weapon. He declined to make a statement when seen at the jail last night.

MAJ. GEN. J. F. WESTON RETIRE FROM ARMY.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Maj. Gen. J. F. Weston, a native of Louisville, retired from the army to-day, his sixty-fourth birthday. From friends in this city many telegrams were sent him at San Francisco, the headquarters of the Department of California, congratulating him upon his long and distinguished military career, commencing with a lieutenant in the Fourth Kentucky cavalry.

MISS KOLB REPUDIATES HER FORMER STATEMENT.

Disappointment For State In Trial of Dr. Clemenson For Wife Murder.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Miss Ann L. Kolb, called as a witness by the court, took the stand in the trial of Dr. Haldin Clemenson for the murder of his wife and denied that she told Dr. Clemenson to chloroform his wife if he could not get rid of her in any other way.

Through Miss Kolb's testimony the State expected to show a motive for the alleged murder, the theory being that the physician wished to be rid of his wife in order that he might devote himself to his medical career.

The witness asserted that all statements made to the police regarding her relations with Dr. Clemenson were obtained under duress and she repudiated them. The State will rest on Monday.

PARDONED THAT HE MAY BE AT MOTHER'S FUNERAL.

Washington, Nov. 13.—To permit the convict to attend the funeral of his mother, the President to-day commuted the sentence imposed upon George West, interviewed for having in his possession counterfeit coins, to take effect immediately. His time would have expired November 21.

SUBPOENAS FOR 250 IN HIGHSEW CASE.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 13.—Subpoenas for 250 persons were issued to-day in connection with the investigation of the Enoch Highsew murder at Mahwah, Ind. The witnesses were ordered to appear before the grand jury Monday afternoon. The prosecutor says he intends to get a record of Highsew's life covering a period of two years previous to his murder.

America heads the world in the production of resin and turpentine.

Tenn. Dr. McCutcheon, pastor of the church, officiating.

The bride was attended by Misses Elizabeth Bouldin, of Houston, Va.; Florance Easley, of Houston, Va.; Lucile Robinson, of Newport, Tenn.; Graham Kyle, Lena Simpson, of Rogersville, and Perry Patterson, of Philadelphia, all of whom wore blue crepe de chine and carried bouquets of pink roses. The groomsmen wore Messrs. Henry Nelson, Robert Kyle, G. P. Kidd, T. P. Sumner, W. M. Pierce, A. K. Morison and Frank Fulkerson.

The maid of honor, Miss Nancy Mance, of Frankfort, Ky., was beautiful in a creation of white chiffon over satin, carrying pink roses. The bridesmaids, of Houston, Va., a brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

The bride was married by her father, Judge Hugh Graham Kyle, and wore a gown of white marquisette, trimmed with real lace, and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony the bride party was driven to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was tendered them.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO GIVE CONCERT NOVEMBER 26.

Brasses, Bassoons and Oboes Increased—Players Arrive Here From Pittsburg and Chicago.

The large list of associate members for the Louisville Symphony Orchestra concerts assures the success of that society and promises audiences which, both for quality and size, will make these events notable in the present musical season.

At the first concert, to be given November 26, at Masonic Theater, at 10 o'clock, the orchestra will play Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Mr. Cox feels full of confidence in the ability of his men to give a musically performance of this great work, for they have been rehearsing with care and earnestness for months, and the orchestra has been strengthened by the addition of several new members. The wood-wind, brasses and oboes, as well as the basses, have been increased, players have been brought here from Pittsburg and Chicago, on a regular salary, to improve their position of the orchestra. This balances the instruments more evenly than before, and insures a solidly and evenness of tone otherwise unattainable.

Mr. Bissup's programme will be of unusual interest. He has been requested to give one of his musical recitations with musical accompaniment, and in response will recite Poe's "Raven." His opening concert in New York was an immense success and all critics were of opinion that his voice is in superlatively good condition. Louisville musicians consider themselves fortunate in having him here as well as the season, when his voice is in superlatively good condition. Mayville, Ky., Nov. 13.—A squad of State Guards, under Capt. Sam, of Lexington, who have been on duty at the Longneck home in this county for several night, returned home to-day. They were dressed in citizens' clothes, but their presence in the county was evidently known, as no night riders were seen while they were here.

Free Remedy Cures a Life-long Constipation

There may be people who are chronically constipated who still doubt that there is a cure for them, but to convince themselves that there is hope they have only to write for a free sample of a remedy that is curing hundreds of people every day who had been constipated all their life long. And this convincing proof will cost no one a cent.

The remedy that is doing wonderful work in the cure of constipation is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and anyone can obtain a bottle for trial by sending name and address to Dr. Caldwell. Thousands of people have come to use this remedy in trouble of the stomach, liver and bowels by first obtaining a free sample from Dr. Caldwell. It is by all odds the ideal laxative for the cure of stubborn constipation, liver trouble, sick headache and such complaints because it not only relieves the distress, but it strengthens the stomach and bowel muscles and causes them into the habit of doing their work regularly again, and that is the ideal cure. In this way it is permanent in its results, which cannot be said of cathartic tablets and pills, or of salts and purgative waters, for these are at best only temporary relief.

First of all Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a free sample bottle as in that way he can best prove his claims. Then, the remedy being sent, and the doctor's claims proved, you can go to your druggist and buy it in the regular way for the use of the entire family. It is not only useful to yourself, but to every member of the family, since you can powerfully when the youngest or the oldest will need a laxative. Mr. F. Rham, of Seneca, Mo., and Mrs. A. Branstetter, of Chicago, Okla., always have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the house for the use of the entire family, and both started modestly and skeptically on a free sample bottle. Send for one and try it. If you have not used it before.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels, and is free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in a few days. For the free sample, send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise, for either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R. 20 Caldwell Building, Monticello, Ill.

KING AS GUEST.

Greatest Honor British Subject Can Enjoy.

NOTHING SPARED FOR SOVEREIGN'S AMUSEMENT.

EDWARD VII. HAS FONDNESS FOR HOUSEPARTIES.

LIKING FOR STAGE. ALSO.

Americans are fully acquainted with the manner in which the President of the United States is entertained when he travels or is on his vacation.

Incumbent of that office is very fond of outdoor exercises, and in that regard he resembles King Edward. The methods of amusing the King of Great Britain, however, are quite different from the means employed when our Chief Magistrate leaves Washington, says the Boston Globe.

It is not an easy matter, according to a foreign exchange, to entertain and amuse royalty either in the home palace or when the king is visiting among his subjects. While it is a decided honor to entertain an emperor or king, it is usually the source of heavy expense and a vast deal of worry and trouble.

Perhaps Edward VII. of England is generally entertained than any other principal monarch. He is a frequent visitor at the homes of his subjects, and in turn entertains a great deal at Sandringham and Windsor. He prefers to visit the homes of those who know his likes and dislikes, who need no prompting to please the royal fancy, such as providing impromptu luncheon, or the other things which are so much to the taste of the king, who own the best shooting preserves and are able to assure their royal guest of a day or more of exhilarating sport with the guns. The king does not like to hang heavily, and that unless he is in the mood to occur, will wait long for another royal visit.

At Houseparties.

One of the king's favorite diversions is attending houseparties. When he feels inclined to spend the week-end with some of his subjects, he is notified in good time so that there may be no hitch in the arrangements for his majesty's comfort.

After reporting on the state of private game, the gamekeepers make ready for a grand hunt, and those who have been invited to the shooting preserve hold a prominent place on his visiting list. Everybody down to the stable boy has a hand in the matter. In the meantime, a provisional list of guests is submitted to his majesty for his perusal. If he does not care to meet any of the party, he is notified, and the guests are then selected, he crosses out their names and suggests others in their place.

On the day set for the visit the royal party and attendants go down and take possession. The king is then as much master of the estate as if he were in his own palace. The king and his hostess rack their brains to devise new and diverting pastimes. Nothing, however, is decided on without consulting his majesty's pleasure.

It is said that lately the king has shown a decided taste for outdoor eating. At fresco luncheons are now in favor at these parties, and their cheerful unconventionality is said to be highly pleasing to King Edward.

Like Fine Dresses.

While in town the king is the guest of honor at numerous dinners and other functions. His majesty exhibits a marked preference for women who are handsome and know how to dress. At these dinners may be seen the wealth of the realm, and the gowns are masterpieces.

Hostesses exert every effort to surpass one another in the originality and lavishness of their entertainments. For this reason, the American wives of English noblemen, with their wealth and aid them, attain such signal success socially.

If his majesty desires to see the play it is not necessary for him to go to the theater. Very frequently, when visitors of state are being entertained at Windsor or Sandringham, a play is presented in the ballroom after dinner.

The king simply summons his theatrical agent, who tells him what productions are running at the time, and suggests which are the better attractions. After the king decides on the play and date, the agent takes full charge of the arrangements. The king, who is a most discerning patron of the stage, exercises great care to select the play that is most likely to prove interesting to his guests.

When the evening selected, the command immediately arranges to transport his company and scenery to the palace on the evening selected.

Since King Edward came to the throne entertainments at Sandringham have become the royal pastime. The king in the honor conferred by the royal command the variety profession has shared with that of the drama.

SOMETIMES HAPPENS THUS.

(Chicago Record-Herald.)

As soon as he could decently break away from his duties, he went to the theater and treated himself four times in rapid succession.

Epilptic Fits of Children

Epilptic fits in children is even of greater frequency than in older people. In their active and restless state, the muscles of the body are in a constant state of vibration, and the slightest disturbance of the nervous system is sufficient to set off a seizure. The disease is usually inherited, and is often associated with other forms of epilepsy. The treatment is usually by the use of bromide of potassium, which acts upon the nervous system and helps to control the spasms. It is important to keep the child as quiet as possible, and to avoid any excitement or fatigue. The diet should be simple and nourishing, and the child should be kept in a cool, airy room. If the fits are severe, medical attention should be sought at once.

Lower Animals and Fish Dress Their Wounds.

DOG GIVES HIMSELF MEDICINE HE NEEDS.

TENCH THE SURGEON FOR PISCATORIAL FRIENDS.

LIMB OF YOUNG BIRD SET.

Remarkable instances of healing and surgery on the part of the lower animals and fish are given by a physician interested in natural history, who is quoted anonymously by the New York Tribune.

"Animals instinctively choose such food as is best suited to them. A large number of animals wash themselves and bathe, as elephants, stags, birds and ants, while they get rid of their parasites by using dust, mud, clay, etc. Those suffering from fever restrict their diet, keep quiet, seek darkness and airy places, drink water and sometimes even plunge into it. Animals suffering from traumatic fever treat themselves by the continued application of cold water, which is considered by physicians to be more certain than any of the other methods. An animal suffering from chronic rheumatism always keeps as far as possible in the sun. When an animal has a wounded leg or arm hanging on, it completes the amputation by means of its teeth.

"Of all the domestic animals the dog seems best fitted to look out for itself when ill. When a dog has lost its appetite it eats the grass (chlorophyll), which acts as an emetic and purgative. When a dog has a fever it seeks the shade, such as off and butter with avidity. A dog on being stung in the muzzle by a viper was observed to plunge its head repeatedly into running water, and eventually recovered. A sporting dog was run over by a carriage. During three weeks it remained lying in a brook, where its food was taken to it. The animal recovered. A terrier dog hurt its right eye. It remained lying under a counter, avoiding light and heat, although it habitually kept close to the fire. It adopted a general treatment, rest and abstinence from food. The local treatment consisted in licking the upper surface of the paw, which it applied to the wounded eye, again licking the paw when it became dry.

"Cats eat grass, especially that species known as catnip. Cats also, when hurt, treat themselves by the regular and continuous irrigation by licking the afflicted part. One observer cites the case of a cat which remained for some time lying on the bank of a river; also that of another cat which had the singular fortitude to remain for forty-eight hours under a jet of cold water.

"Sheep and cows, when ill, seek out certain herbs. Horses, when constipated, eat fatty substances with great avidity until relief comes.

Fishes' Physician.

"The tench (Tinca tinca) is known as the fishes' physician, and for it has been literally claimed the royal gift of healing by touch. Camden, in his 'Britannica,' says: 'I have seen the bellies of fishes which have been rent open by wounds, which the tench has healed by its power exerted by this fish are numerous. The following mentioned by Mr. Wright in his book on 'Fishes and Fishing,' is one of the many that might be quoted:

"A gentleman who was unfortunately unable to leave the house for some time, through an accident, amused himself by making small artificial flies, which he did very neatly. He kept some minnows and a tench, about two and a half inches long, in a very large, wide-mouthed bottle; all the minnows had died except one; my friend was just finishing a fly as I went into his room, and he held it upon the surface of the water in the bottle, as he was often in the habit of doing; the minnow darted at it so rapidly that he could not withdraw the fly in time to prevent the hook from pricking the minnow; the little fish descended three-fourths of the way down the bottle, and then, at a moment, with his nose pointing downward, then swiftly went the remainder of the way, rubbed his nose for a few seconds against the side of the tench, and again swam about as lively as before. We both joined in the opinion that the cure was really a fable as to the tench being the Asclepius of fish; for here was an example, before our eyes, of a fish being wounded, and immediately, and distinctly, directing him to seek a remedy."

The "Fishes' Hospital."

"In the Wicawachee River, Florida, is a spring bubbling up from some hidden source, and this has been named the 'Fishes' Hospital' by persons who have observed it. Owing to the clearness of the water every foot of the deep hole in the river bottom, from which the spring bursts forth, can be observed, and numerous eye-witnesses testify to seeing many wounded and sick fish coming there for refuge and healing. In consequence of some peculiar property in the spring water, their wounds heal rapidly, and as soon as cured they disappear, to be succeeded by others in the spring.

"A year or two ago Dutch colonial papers reported a remarkable case of animal instinct. The people in the village of Legowo, in the Japanese province of Salatia, suffered ravages from hordes of gray monkeys, which destroyed their plantations. The Dutch sub-Governor recommended that they try strychnine to get rid of the pests.

"The favorite fruits of the monkeys were accordingly collected in large quantities, heavily dosed with strychnine and deposited in the woods. The monkeys ate freely, and many of them became violently ill, but none died. It was then discovered that the monkeys were not eating the strychnine-laden fruit, but the leaves of the tembakian, a certain weed which grows profusely in the archipelago. It was found that when the animals were too ill to seek the weed themselves they had it brought to them by other monkeys.

Dressing For Wounds.

"If a chimpanzee be wounded, it stops the bleeding by plugging its ear with mud or dressing it with leaves and grass. A mother monkey has been observed to treat a young one which had hurt one of its thumbs, so that blood came out of the wound, by sucking the wounded member in its mouth, thus relieving the pain almost immediately.

"A Western observer records a case of bird surgery which came under his observation. A swallow had built its nest in his barn, and one day, being a lover of birds, he climbed to the nest and found in it two young swallows, one being smaller and one day, being the other and having a slighter covering of feathers. Upon taking the young bird in his hands he was still more astonished to find one of its legs very thoroughly bandaged with horse-hairs. Having carefully removed the hairs one by one, he was still more astonished to find that the nestling's leg was broken. He carefully replaced the hairs on the nest and resolved to wait further developments. Upon visiting the patient the next day the leg was again found bandaged as before. The bird-surgeon was not again interfered observation, in about two weeks it was found that the hairs were being cautiously removed, only a few each day, and finally, when all were taken off, the calous was distinctly felt and the union of bone evidently perfect, as the bird was able to fly off with its mates.

Ant Ambulances.

"It is asserted by certain observers that an ant is a little ill, or slightly wounded, also is carefully tended by her companions; while, on the other hand, those which are dangerously ill or wounded are carried out of the nest to die. The warrior ants have regularly organized ambulances. Latreille told the antennae of an ant, and other ants came and covered the wounded part with a transparent fluid secreted in their mouths.

"According to Dr. Pierce, a dentist of West Roxbury, Mass., who has spent several years in the jungles of Africa, the squirrels and monkeys of the section he visited have discovered a blue mud, much the same in color as that which covers the diamond fields, and in this clay is a large percentage of opium. When the animals have the toothache they plaster this clay into the cavity as a remedy, and the creature gives relief and often kills the offending nerve."

THE LIFE OF OLD EGYPT.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

Many queens of ancient Egypt were periodic blonds. The most golden hue and glowed in it. Worse still, the aurora of beautiful hair was generally false, and to say the least, it was not natural. About the result was said but fatal. And the men, that is the real high potentates who were of the same color as the women, every time a breath was drawn, were no better. The fact is that the ancient Egyptians of huge fortune used to wear false wigs and wigs without the slightest shame and sought their servants to say nice things about the borrowed appendages.

All this false glory of by-gone days was reported by the late Mr. H. D. Philadelphus, who kept people laughing in a Brooklyn, N. Y., lecture on "The Life of Old Egypt." He said that "fashions of civilization," and the Egyptians were highly civilized at that period. They had shaven heads and wigs, some of which were of monstrous size. Frequently also the men wore false beards. In recent years, however, the wigs of some mummies had been found in a queen's tomb under the glass, and a great many of the recent Egyptian had not the decorative ornament which surmounts the headpiece, so often seen in the museums, to be an arrangement for holding a preparation of oil, probably mutagen, which could be rubbed on the head and shoulders. GRAND JURY AND MISDEMEANORS

November Body Criticizes Present System.

Says Petty Cases Should End In Lower Courts.

Urges Revision of Criminal Code As Necessity.

TEXT OF SPECIAL REPORT.

Sharper and more vigorous than the complaint of any previous grand jury is the protest made yesterday by the November grand jury in a special report to Judge Joseph Pryor, of the Criminal Court, against the practice of the lower courts holding petty offenders for examination by it, where, in the view of the members of the grand jury, these offenders might much better have been dealt with before the original court. The report is unanimous, being signed only by the foreman, Philip S. Tuley, and comes after the grand jury has been in session for less than half of its term and after it has dismissed a large number of cases, this fact having been remarked upon by the attaches of the Criminal Court.

A good part of the special report is given over to the recommendation that a new system of regulating the proceedings in such cases and to a recital of the evils which the "wretched practice" that now obtains has resulted in. The report is along the same lines as were addresses delivered by Lorraine C. Mix, Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney, during the campaign.

Mr. Mix, in his position of Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney, deals chiefly with the grand jury and draws up the indictments already they have advocated some such revision of the Criminal Code as that urged by the present grand jury. The effect of the present system is felt keenly in the Criminal Court, where delays are unavoidable in the trials of most cases. Witnesses in trivial cases often are compelled to go again and again to the court, called to give the same testimony, as is pointed out in the report of the grand jury. The petty offenders, given in the lower court and before the grand jury. Further than that, it is argued, the inhumanity of keeping a poor man in jail for months, awaiting the grand jury's action on his case, and then two months more before his case comes to trial, all for an offense for which no jury would give him a sentence of half the time, is apparent. The petty offenders and the trivial cases of which the grand jury complain mostly are recruited from the poorer and lower classes of people and unjust confinement does not tend to improve his temper, his morals or his conduct.

Text of Special Report.

The text of the special report of the grand jury is as follows: Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13, 1909.—To His Honor, the Judge of the Criminal Court of Jefferson County: The November grand jury begs leave to submit this special report upon conditions confronting it from and after its first session. In the county jail about seventy prisoners awaited the consideration of their cases, while perhaps fifty more had been held to the grand jury and released on bond. The October grand jury had been unable to reduce this number, though it had zealously applied itself to its duties and given consideration to about 125 cases. It was prevented from accomplishing more because of the same conditions which have hampered the work of every grand jury for years past and are to-day retarding its progress.

These conditions are brought about by the necessity for grand jury trials in cases of misdemeanors, wherein the offenses are slight or unimportant, and in which the defendants have been held to the grand jury after a hearing in the courts below. These cases could have been—and should have been—disposed of definitely there. In many of the cases the evidence is insufficient or flimsy, and the grand jury that it is difficult to find any justification for failure on the part of the Police Court or Magistrate's Court to dispose of them finally by the imposition of fines or imprisonment.

Sufficient Penalty Anticipated.

The grand jury cannot consistently disregard these cases nor diminish their number when it is apparent that some punishment is deserved, unless it be that in their judgment the imprisonment of the defendants, pending a hearing of their cases before that body, is sufficient penalty. In the face of the unreasonably large number of such minor cases, which every grand jury is called upon to hear, we are compelled to conclude that the occasion for this wretched practice on the part of the lower courts is to dispose of them based upon indictments—not convictions—when brought in by the grand jury in such cases. If this be true, the public may well ponder and question the wisdom of a system which renders the rewards of judges and arresting officers paramount to the expeditious and final administration of justice. The payment of these fees, in our judgment, nullifies all consideration of haste to the city and county and directly involves untold inconvenience and loss of time to citizens needlessly called upon the second time to appear as witnesses and later to serve as jurymen in cases too trivial to call for a jury. This practice has been condemned by almost every grand jury for years gone by. Their reports have been so many and so futile that another report in the same vein can hold little promise of greater effectiveness. We nevertheless beg to file our report in equally strong condemnation and thus join with those preceding grand juries who have expensed themselves to this effect through such foremen as Messrs. George Gaubert, D. N. Clark, J. H. Wymond, Henry W. Gray, W. H. Matinek and others.

Needs Legislature's Attention.

In our judgment the situation demands the earnest attention of the legislature, shortly to convene. Through you we appeal to it and to the Senators and Representatives from this county to make every effort to devise means and enact statutes which will afford the needed relief and apply the law to the facts. Pending this much-needed change we appeal also to the Magistrate's Court of the county and to the Judges of the Police Court to exercise in these minor cases the discretion and authority vested in them by the law, and by virtue of which authority they can be satisfied promptly and definitely, while the circumstances surrounding them are fresh and the witnesses at hand. The practice now in vogue exacts vast expense upon the city and county. It involves the maintenance of prisoners in the county jail when not imprisoned on bond. It impairs the efficiency and increases the cost of maintenance of the police force, requiring the attendance of the police officers before the grand jury and later at trials in court, summing witnesses the second time incurs great expense and loss of time by police officers. Citizens are uselessly annoyed and inconvenienced by being required the second time to reappear as witnesses or to serve as jurors. This service is at best but grudgingly and reluctantly rendered, and under these circumstances officers cannot be justly blamed because of their disinclination to perform this duty. We are frank to say we have small hopes that anything definite can be accomplished by this report, but we believe that the attention of the public is centered upon this matter for correction.

Colored Chiffon Blouses, Special at $10

Special attention is directed to an exceptional line of Colored Chiffon Blouses at $10.00. This line is made up of a great number of attractive styles, many copies from French models, and all new shades and staple colors. A solidly plaited model, trimmed at neck and cuffs with moire silk bands, otherwise plain; the whole waist being solidly tucked or plaited, buttons down back, is one of the best styles shown; $10.00.

Men's Cape Gloves $1.25

These gloves come in all the wanted shades of tan. They are "P. X. M." sewn and are very strong values at the price. We consider them the best street gloves ever shown in Louisville at less than $1.50. They come in regular and cadet sizes.

Pictures for Gifts.

The collection of English prints, carbon photos and etchings, which is now assembled in our picture department in the basement, offers many timely suggestions for holiday gifts. Lovers of art will take pleasure in inspecting this collection and making selections while the assortment is at its best.

Silk Specials

The Silk section is doing the largest business for years. The large and constantly changing assortments being shown are attracting a great many customers who are beginning to appreciate the efforts being made in this direction. For this week we offer some unusual values in wanted weaves and colors in high-grade silks.

200 Pieces of English Allovers and Nets

In all the prevailing new shades, as well as white, cream and ecru, have just been received and placed on sale. The prices are exceedingly reasonable, ranging from 75c to $2.50 per yard.

In many instances we can match these nets with the identical patterns in laces and inserting. These goods are the latest productions of Nottingham, England, and are most desirable.

In the same department we have received and opened for inspection an exquisite line of Silk Nets, mostly Lyons make, in exceedingly fine quality. Most of these nets are in black.

These are our own direct importation, and on this account we are able to quote very low prices on them.

2,500 pieces of Cotton Torchon and Cluny Laces, the prettiest line imaginable, and our own importation, are marked much below the regular figures.

White China for Decorating---20% Discount

For the coming week we will offer a discount of 20 per cent. from the regular prices of all White China for decorating. This stock is now very comprehensive, and this is done to stimulate early buying for the holiday season. Many new and choice pieces will be found in this assortment, and it is urged that you make early selection and take advantage of this liberal price concession.

Three-Piece Broadcloth Suits $47.50

These much desired garments have just been received. They are made of a most excellent chiffon broadcloth. The dress is braided, and is a most attractive model, with plaited skirt. The coat is plain with satin collar, and is satin-lined. The tailoring is exceptionally good. Black, blue, wistaria, ashes of roses and walnut are the colors these suits come in; $47.50.

Stylish Tailored Suits at $25 and $35

When one picks up one of these Suits and examines the materials, linings and workmanship it seems quite wonderful that so much can be done for $25 and $35. The materials are broadcloths, homespun and diagonals made up in a wide choice of long and short coat designs, either single or double-breasted. All the style tendencies shown by the best designers are to be found in our suits at these prices.

Street Dresses $21.50 to $29.50

We have on sale the best collection of these practical dresses we have ever shown. They are most fashionable for street wear under the long cloth or fur coats. The materials are broadcloths, wide wale diagonals and a fine quality of serge. Some are strictly plain, others have tiny chiffon or lace yokes and are trimmed with flat bands of braid, or braided in rat-tail or soutache. In a good selection of the new shades.

Silk Mixed Jacquards Yd. 45c

To-morrow we place on sale an exceptionally pretty line of Silk-mixed Jacquards. They are in all the new colors, pink, tan, red, old rose, lavender, blue and green, in plain colors, stripes, checks and figures. Splendid for dresses and waists. Per yard, 45c.

Bargains In Waist Nets Yd. 65c

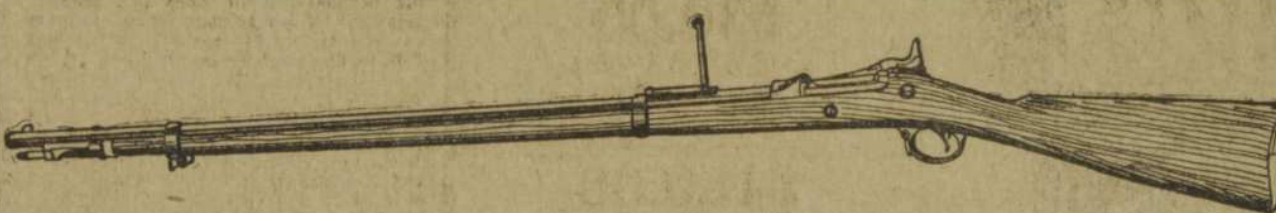

Ten stylish patterns of Waist Nettings that have been selling at 75c and 85c per yard are placed on special sale to-morrow at 65c per yard to close. They are all in white, and are exceptional values.

The modern Sherlock climbed through the window and entered the kitchen.

"His wife is away," ejaculated Sherlock, as he looked into the room with the critical eye of Scotland Yard. "I shall find out soon."

And then Sherlock began to count the polished dishes piled up on the shelf.

"She has been away exactly fourteen days," he commented.

"And how did you find that out, chief?" asked his assistant.

"Why, I read easy! Married men never wash their dishes when their wives are away, and there are forty-two polished dishes on the shelf. That means fourteen days."

"Yes, but for fourteen days?"

Louisville's Largest Cloak and Suit House.

We planned this sale two weeks ago, and have made great preparations for it. We contracted for immense quantities of Suits and Coats and each express brings us the smartest and most beautiful suits and coats that it has been our good fortune to show. They were all bought considerably under price and by sacrificing a large share of our regular profits we are able to include these various purchases here in this sale at prices so low as to be beyond the scope of the average store. Monday's offerings include the greatest values we have shown this season.

The large tobacco barn belonging to W. J. Dickenson, of Trenton, burned last night about 7 o'clock. The barn contained about 1,500 pounds of tobacco. The loss was $2,500, with no insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Fifteen thousand pictures are now on exhibition in the two great salons of Paris. These represent about three acres of canvas. The total length of the pictures without the frames would be about ten miles.

PROMPT RETURNS

Must Be Made By Sheriffs To Treasurer.

MONEY BEING KEPT IN HOME BANKS.

MAJ. C. W. LONGMIRE FOR SERGEANT-AT-ARMS.

DIPLOMATIC HOUSE EMPLOYEE.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 13.—(Special.)—Sheriffs all over Kentucky have been slow about making their settlements with the State each month, as the law requires, and Frank P. James, State Auditor, is preparing to go after some of them with a club in an effort to force monthly settlements. The State is short on money, Mr. James says, because some of the Sheriffs have not been complying with the law and have been waiting until the last few days to make their settlements with the State. Mr. James says this is done so that the banks in the home towns of those Sheriffs who are dilatory can use the State's money.

Steps to force immediate settlement will be taken by Mr. James, and he hopes to have the treasury full within the next few days. The Sheriffs whom he is after are not delinquent, as their final settlements are not due, but the law requires that the money collected each month be sent to the State Treasurer as collected, and this has not been done by many of the Sheriffs. Mr. James says the Sheriff of a certain county will let the money he collects lie in a bank in his home town for two months after it is collected and send it in to the State only when the final settlement is required of the Sheriff. This keeps the State treasury short of money.

Jefferson county's Sheriffs have always made monthly settlements and Mr. James says he has no fault to find with the Sheriffs from that county.

Longmire Announces.

MaJ. C. W. Longmire to-day makes announcement that he will again be a candidate for Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, subject to the Democratic caucus.

MaJ. Longmire has made himself known from one end of Kentucky to the other by his devotion to duty amidst the most trying circumstances. That he is particularly fitted to meet the sudden and unexpected emergencies that sometimes arise in legislative bodies and to manage them without the loss of his own self-respect or that due the members of the House is amply proven, his friends say. In the calm manner in which he carried out the important and serious duties intrusted to him in the exciting days of the early spring of 1906 at the time of the changing of the control of the control of Taylor to that of the Democratic administration. So strained were the relations between the various parties and factions that the slightest breeze of ill-tempered move would have precipitated violence.

MaJ. Longmire is now, as he has been for a long time, connected with the State Guards, being a Major in the Second Regiment, and at all times has proven one of the most capable militia officers of the State.

So far he has no opposition for the post of Sergeant-at-Arms, and his friends believe he will have none.

Dark Horse Wins.

In pursuance of the plan to teach the children something of city government by practical illustration, Superintendent H. C. McKee held an election at the city school this morning for city officers to take part in a moot or imitation city government during the coming weeks. One councilman was elected from each room in the city school and the council will meet in regular sessions at stated intervals to discuss matters that might usually come before a sure enough city council.

It was a most interesting election, and what is known as a "dark horse" won for Mayor, in the person of Theo. Blakey, Jr., the son of Assistant Attorney General T. B. Blakey, and a nephew of Clayton Blakey, of Louisville. Up until this morning his name had not been mentioned as being a candidate, but his friends slipped up on the day and put in a big vote for him at the last minute, and he won in consequence of their clever work.

The health board and other city officers will be selected at the meeting of the council, which will be next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Petition In Bankruptcy.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed today with the Clerk of the United States Court by Edward H. Whitton, a contractor of Georgetown. The schedule shows that his liabilities amount to $2,482 and his assets amount to $4,423. Mr. Whitton has been in bad health and is now sick in the hospital, else he might have been able to carry out enough of his contracts to stave off bankruptcy. L. P. Sinclair, of Georgetown, is his attorney.

Teachers Got Pay.

County School Superintendent E. R. Jones was greeted to-day by a smiling lot of teachers from all over the county. It is payday for the county teachers, and the check for Franklin county having arrived, the money was kept busy paying the money. This is the second installment paid out to the teachers this fall, and there was some fear there would not be enough money in the treasury to pay the second installment, but Capt. Farley believes the teachers should be paid before anybody else, and reserved enough money for that purpose.

MADISON BREWERIES

MUST NOT SELL.

Notified That the "Lid" Will Be On After Tuesday.

Madison, Ind., Nov. 13.—(Special.)—Mayor Cisco this afternoon notified the two local breweries that after Tuesday next when the last saloon in Madison goes out, they will not be permitted, under the law, to sell beer in any quantity.

Forty bottles of beer seized by police in the cellar of a former saloon were smashed by the Sheriff and Chief of Police to-day.

SCHOOLS CLOSED

TO STOP DIPHTHERIA.

Carlsile, Ky., Nov. 13.—(Special.)—The schools at Wilson's, Barfoot and Bald Hill, this county, have been closed as a precaution against an epidemic of diphtheria, which threatens this county. The schools at Taylor's Creek, Rose Hill, Bell's Grove and East Union were closed a few days ago, making seven in all. Four deaths have occurred. Dr. John M. Wells, the County Health Officer, reports the situation slightly improved and hopes to avert an epidemic.

Happy Feet—Happy, Healthy Child

There is nothing so important to a child's physical health—to a happy disposition—as proper shoes. The ordinary shoe cramps the growing, tender muscles and bones, pinches the toes and often results in serious nervous diseases, not mentioning the lesser disorders—corns, bunions and enlarged joints.

Why not act against any possible chance of ruining your child's health, when it costs so much?

WENT TO RIVER TO DROWN HERSELF.

Woman From Indianapolis Tells a Strange Story of Abduction At Henderson.

Henderson, Ky., Nov. 13.—Dissuaded from her announced intention to commit suicide after she had walked into the water near the wharfboat with her apron laden with stones to make sure her body would sink, Thursday afternoon a woman giving her name as Pearl Hoyt, of Indianapolis, told the most remarkable story of alleged abduction ever divulged in Henderson.

The woman gave her name to the police as Honnan Glory, but in conversation, before she was turned over to the police, she said her name was Hoyt, and that her address was 203 East Washington street, Indianapolis.

She said she was disgusted with life and did not care to live any longer. To the police she was very reticent. She told practically nothing that would throw light on her case. She was provided with transportation to Evansville and left the city on the boat.

The woman said a man, whose name she refused to give, visited at her home in Indianapolis a few days ago. He gave her a glass of whisky, and she believes it must have contained some powerful sleeping potion. At any rate, she became in a state of coma and could tell of no occurrence that preceded her awakening in this city Thursday morning. She refused to tell where she stayed while in this city. She did not tell the manner of her escape from her captor.

The police were notified, and Officer Hoggard took the girl to headquarters, and she was given transportation to Evansville. The woman was about twenty years old, of medium height, and weighed probably 120 pounds, dark complexion, black eyes and hair.

WASHINGTON NICKEL.

(Philadelphia Special) to New York Times.) It has been learned on good authority that dies have been prepared by the engravers of the United States Mint in this city for a proposed United States 5-cent piece bearing the head of George Washington, to take the place of the nickel now in circulation.

It cannot be said yet whether the Government will adopt the coin or not. Many hundred dies have been made for the coin, but if it is not adopted, the coin follows the new Lincoln penny. It will be the first coin in actual authorized circulation to carry the head of Washington.

Yet several pattern coins bearing the head of Washington have been made. One of these was adopted officially, since 1783, when some 5,000 to 10,000 by a well-known designer named Woven were struck off. As late as 1863 a pattern for a 2-cent piece bearing his head was made and in 1866 a series of pattern 5-cent pieces, with his head upon them, were designed, but never circulated.

This particular coin has been designed either by Engraver Morgan or Barber, of the mint. Specimens to be struck off soon will be transmitted to the Treasury Department in Washington. The adoption of the coin rests with the Treasury Department.

EXPLAINING AN EXCUSE.

Atlanta Journal.) An Atlanta merchant has frequent occasion to rebuke his dark porter for his tardiness in reporting for duty in the morning. He is always ready with a more or less ingenious excuse.

"You're two hours later, Ike!" exclaimed the employer one morning. "This sort of thing must stop, otherwise I'm going to fire you. Understand?"

"Deed, Mistah Edward," replied Ike, "it wain't mah fault, dis time! Home!"

"Kicked by a mule?" Well, even if that were so, it wouldn't delay you for more than an hour. You'll have to think of a better excuse, mister Ike."

"Ike looked aggrieved. 'Mistah Edward,' he continued, solemnly, 'it might have been all right if dat mule kicked me in dis direction, but he didn't—he kicked me de other way.'"

EMERGENCY GUILD WILL HOLD BAZAR FRIDAY.

The Ladies' Emergency Guild of the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian church will hold a bazar and luncheon next Friday at 67 Fourth Avenue. Useful household articles and home-made novelties will be offered for sale. The following women will have charge of the tables: Miss Anna Barr, Mrs. Levy Tyler, Mrs. Hite Bates, Mrs. Otto Graves, Mrs. C. D. Gates, Mrs. Edward Porter, Mrs. David Fairlie, Mrs. W. E. Caldwell and Mrs. Thomas McCullough.

ENVOY WASHED INTO SEA.

(Madrid Correspondence London Express.) A mission sent by the Sultan of Morocco to give peaceable advice to the Kabyles, has ended in a remarkable tragedy.

The members of it embarked on the Spanish gunboat Alvaro de Bazan at Tangier for Melilla. When the gunboat was thirty miles off Cape Tresforas a violent storm arose, and the chief of the mission, Abdouss Lam Londe, was swept overboard by an enormous wave, taking with him 4,000 ($3,000) in bank notes, in addition to the seals and credentials of the mission.

All efforts to save him failed, and his wife and daughter-in-law were with difficulty prevented from following him.

TAKE DEPOSITION OF MYSTERIOUS WOMAN

"MRS. M'PHERSON" TELLS WHAT SHE KNOWS OF DEATH OF MISS NELLIE HARRIS.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—F. C. Hunter, Coroner of Wapacomet, O., arrived here to-day and obtained a deposition from Mrs. A. McPherson, the unidentified woman who has been considered an important witness in the inquest over the body of Miss Nellie Harris, who was found dead in the home of Mrs. Lillian H. McFarland in the Ohio town October 23.

The taking of the deposition, which Mr. Hunter says throws some light on the incidents of the death of the young woman, who was the daughter of former Congressman Stephen R. Harris, brought no publicity to Mrs. McPherson.

In company with Sidney S. Gorham, attorney for Mrs. McPherson, Mr. Hunter visited the woman and listened to her story. The Coroner declined to state the identity of the address of Mrs. McPherson, saying that she was ill and should not be disturbed. Mr. Gorham supplemented this information by declaring that his client, if she were able, would cheerfully go to Ohio

HUNTERS WARNED TO KEEP OFF FARMS.

Carlsile, Ky., Nov. 13.—(Special.)—The hunting season will open Monday and the hunters will find some difficulty in finding places to hunt, as most of the farmers of this county are warning the hunters against trespassing on their premises. Both rabbits and quail are reported scarcer than usual.

YOUNG HUNTER ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Eddyville, Ky., Nov. 13.—(Special.)—Powell Catlett, the 17-year-old son of Mrs. Sallie P. Catlett, accidentally shot himself this morning while pumping water at the Eddyville camp grounds. The load took effect in the fleshy part of his arm between his elbow and shoulder, stripping the flesh from the bone. Dr. Kinsolving dressed the wound and the young man is doing well. He had been hunting.

CASTRO SUFFERS FROM ACUTE KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Malaga, Spain, Nov. 13.—It is authoritatively stated that Cipriano Castro, the former President of Venezuela, who is soon to take up his residence here, is suffering from an acute affection of the kidneys.

NEWS BROKEN

To Mrs. Woodworth of Husband's Suicide.

HAD ARRIVED IN LEXINGTON TO VISIT SISTER.

MR. WOODWORTH IN GOOD SPIRITS WHEN WIFE LEFT.

INTENTION WAS TO GO WEST.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 13.—(Special.)—Upon her arrival here this morning to visit her sister, Mrs. Anna Lloyd Woodworth, was met at the train by the news that her husband, William A. Woodworth, had committed suicide at a hotel in St. Louis yesterday. Mrs. Woodworth had left her husband day before yesterday in St. Louis, it being understood that as his health had broken down and he was out of work she should come here to visit her sister, Mrs. Edwin B. Bush, and he would go West to recuperate and find something to do.

Although he had been in bad health, Mr. Woodworth was apparently in good spirits when his wife left him. Mrs. Woodworth was taken to the home of her sister, Mrs. Bush, in the Gray flats. It is probable that Mr. Woodworth's body will be taken to his former home, Muncie, Ind., where his parents reside, for interment. A brother residing at Lebanon, Ind., has gone to St. Louis to take charge of the body.

Mrs. Woodworth will remain here until notified by her brother-in-law of what disposition will be made of the body. Mrs. Woodworth, before her marriage to Mr. Woodworth, which took place in Lexington ten years ago, Miss Anna Lloyd, daughter of William Lloyd, who was for many years connected with the Eastern Kentucky Asylum in this city as custodian of the buildings and grounds. Up to the time of her marriage she resided in Lexington and is well known here. She is a sister of Mrs. Edwin B. Bush.

Amendment to Constitution.

The Mining Engineering Society of the College of Mines will probably adopt an amendment to its constitution at its next meeting on December 7, which it is believed will be of great benefit to the mining interests of Kentucky.

The amendment provides that mine superintendents and engineers may be elected honorary members and that all alumni of the college shall be included in this class. It is expected that by this means the active members, consisting of the engineers in the several courses of mining, will be brought into closer touch with not only the miners and operators of this and other States among whom their duty will be cast, but that the honorary members themselves will be greatly benefited by being kept in touch through the society with the most improved mining methods and the latest economic phases of mining questions which are constantly being threshed out in experiment, debate and painstaking studies in comparative mining methods by the members.

To carry on this work a corresponding secretary will probably be elected who will preserve the contributions of the members from time to time, and whose duty will be to make a record of all new and important discoveries and determinations and compile the same to the entire membership. Several of the alumni members are engaged in coal and gold mining in this and other States, while one is teaching mining in one of the Western universities.

Pleasants—Hanna.

Frank L. Hanna, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Miss Lella Pleasants, of Yonerville, N. C., were married yesterday afternoon at the residence of the Rev. T. C. Eaton, the officiating minister. The bridegroom is a prosperous stock farmer and the bride has been attending a school of telegraphy in Cincinnati. After the ceremony the couple left for their home in Florida.

Suit For $2,000.

J. M. Darnaby, as executor under the will of Thomas F. Muir, filed suit in the Fayette Circuit Court yesterday against Annie King and Samuel King and the Kentucky Educational Society asking for judgment for $2,000 with interest on a note, secured by lien on real estate.

Election Certificates Delivered.

The Fayette County Election Commission today signed the election certificates for the candidates elected on November 2, and the certificates were delivered to the newly elected officials. Those who received the certificates were as follows:

Watts Parker, Circuit Judge; James C. Rogers, Circuit Clerk; John R. Allen, Commonwealth's Attorney; W. Percy Scott, County Judge; Theo. Lewis County Clerk; Daniel Scott, Sheriff; Butler South, Jailer; Police Judge; D. Gray Falconer, County Attorney; W. P. Kistner, County Representative; T. C. Bradley, County Treasurer; J. P. Balinger, Jailer; John Gunn, Surveyor; Dr. J. D. Kiser, Coroner; Mrs. Nannie O. Falconer, County School Superintendent; Moonen Barnes, Assessor; Aldermen: Dodd, Huffman, McCarthy, Hunt, McFarland, and Overstreet; Councilmen: Keen, Holland, Shryock, Skinner, Neely, Miller, Board of Education: P. S. Graves, Ben D. Bell.

Easy Fat Reduction

When buttermilk and gymnastics were the only known cure for certain cases many people preferred to stay fat—dreaded the remedy worse than the disease.

Now these two grim lions on the road to slimness have been overcome and a way has been found to reduce a very safe and pleasant affair. You can eat and drink and be merry and lazy and still lose 10 to 15 ounces of useless fat daily. Folks with double chins and stout abdomens can lose them in a month and yet not strain, bother or deny themselves a single blessed thing. It does not cost much either—any druggist will fix you up—and there is no waiting; results begin when you do.

Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime of this simple, harmless mixture: 3 oz. Marmolite, 3 oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3 oz. Peppermint. Water, and you will strip off evenly, without wringing, all the useless fat that now annoys and gushes you.

ADAGE GONE WRONG.

(Philadelphia Record.)
Government employees in the Federal building have about decided to abandon their belief in adages as the result of an experience the other day of one of the oldest and most popular men in the post-office department. The man in question is over 70 years of age, and his appearance is marked by a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles which he has worn for a long time. While walking along one of the corridors in the building he noticed a pin on the floor. "See a pin pick it up and all that day you will have good luck," he murmured as he stooped to the floor to pick up the symbol of good fortune. But the good luck did not come. As the old man bent his body his spectacles fell to the floor and broke in many pieces, and while picking up the gold-rimmed spectacles he broke, causing him many kinds of annoyances. Hence the lack of faith among the Federal employees in adages and superstitions.

SOMEWHAT DIFFERENT.

(Houston Post.)
"Your daughter was to give me her answer to a very important question this evening."

He seated, she will be down in a half hour or so."

"Is she making up her mind?"

"No, that would not take long. It's her face."

Aeroplane Operators.

A slight breeze kept the aeroplane operators on the ground during the early part of the afternoon, but about 4 o'clock the patient spectators were rewarded with the unusual sight of three dirigibles and two aeroplanes all navigating the heavens at the same time. As on the first day, the dirigible carried off the honors, Knabenshue, Dixon and Beachy performing the most intricate maneuvers at a height of over a thousand feet. They demonstrated that, in calm weather at least, they have absolute control over their air craft.

Willard and Curtiss made several short flights in their aeroplanes, handling the machines with apparent ease and rising and alighting without the slightest difficulty. Neither, however, attempted to circle the track, giving as their reason that they were not sufficiently familiar with the ground.

A feature of the day was a five-mile foot race in which twenty men started. It was won by Lovell Draper in 30:2-5.

Stem-winding watches were the invention of Noel in 1851.

Three Big Suit Values

(Second Floor.)

Nearly five hundred high-class, newest style Fall Suits have just been added to our stock at a price concession you cannot fail to appreciate.

The actual saving is such that rather than quote comparative prices (a practice much abused) we prefer that you see the suits and judge for yourselves.

For convenience of inspection and selection we have divided this big purchase into three bargain price lots as follows:

The Suits in Lot Number 1

Seventy-five Handsomely Tailored Cloth Suits, in the newest long-coat models, lined with satin; they are made and finished in a thoroughly careful manner, and are to be had in a variety of fancy weave fabrics, in black and colors; in a complete line of sizes for women and misses. We have many times sold suits of no better quality at much higher price than twelve-fifty.

Suits in Lot Number 2

In this lot are nearly two hundred finely tailored Suits, in more than a dozen of the season's best styles and in a wide range of fine wool fabrics, in every fashionable color and weave. Every suit in this lot is a high-class man-tailored garment that was made to sell at a much higher price than fourteen ninety-five. See them; they are wonderful bargains.

Suits in Lot Number 3

In this particular lot we have more than one hundred of the finest quality Tailored Suits. They are made of the choicest wool fabrics and in styles that will not fail to appeal to the most particular people; very handsome garments.

BIGGEST CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

(New York Evening Post.)
America now holds the honor of producing the largest chrysanthemum ever known. It was exhibited for the first time at the show of the American Institute and Chrysanthemum Society of America, and was sixteen inches across. England has always had the lead in this flower before, but its best bloom is only fourteen inches in diameter.

The new wonder was raised on the estate of Mrs. D. Willis James, at Madison, N. J., by William Duckham. Mr. Duckham is believed the French chrysanthemum President Loubet (white) with an Australian broody yellow bloom, and planted the seed two years ago. Last year he took cuttings from the best seedling and grew about a score of plants, all of which produced huge lemon-white blooms, surpassing anything hitherto known in point of size.

Mr. Duckham called his new variety "The Duke of Devonshire." The judges marked it 94, out of a possible 100.

THE DIGNITY OF ART.

(Chicago Post.)
"Mr. Skelchett," says the nervous author, "I have been looking over the drawings you are making to illustrate my novel, 'A Romance of Old Rome.'"

"Yes," breathes the artist, lighting another cigarette.

"Well, you see—the fact is, the story is one of the time of Julius Caesar, and you are making all the pictures modern, even to the clothing."

"Not easily, you see. If I might suggest that you would read the manuscript."

"Not I think I'm doing enough when I illustrate a story, without being compelled to read it also."

MEN FOR GIRLS TO SHUN.
(New York Press.)
Mrs. Winifred Barney, of Chicago, a widow and the mother of five daughters, warns girls regarding the kind of men to avoid. She speaks especially to working girls, and there are two points to be guarded against, above all others, "When ever any man," says Mrs. Barney, "asks a girl to do anything which he at the same time asks her to keep from her mother's knowledge that thing is wrong, no matter how innocent it may seem. Again, when a man begins to criticize his wife to a young woman and to seek her sympathy in his domestic affairs, that girl is in peril. She would better leave his employ or refuse his friendship at once. It spells ruin for her otherwise, where no other women are employed. She believes that in numbers there is comparative safety for a woman, whether in office or store."

RURAL BRIDE

And Her Reasons For Marrying Discussed.

COMMENTS OF ELDERLY WOMAN IN FRANKFORT STATION.

SOCIETY AT CAPITAL CONTINUES PEACEFUL EXISTENCE.

FEW PARTIES ON CALENDAR.

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)
Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 13.—If it were not for the many entertaining things that humanity's "job lot" afforded us these past few weeks, that have been "stale, flat and unprofitable," in society, there would be no news from the Capital of Kentucky.

As it is there could be a volume written each week by one who would take the trouble to sit in the station on Saturdays and watch the ebb and flow of humanity as they come up from the smaller town—not yet reached by the interurbans—to do their weekly shopping.

Saturday was a dreary day at the shed, and there is one dear, sprightly soul who comes and does her weekly shopping, and while waiting for "paw" to get shaved, she sits in the big, roomy rocking chair in the ladies' waiting room and brings her knitting to while away the time, and she would otherwise hang heavy on her alert body.

Tongue Keeps Pace With Needles.
Never once did those knitting needles stop while her tongue maintained the same steady pace. Once in a while she would look up absently at the clock on the wall, and then she would look at her silver-rimmed "specks" to see how her philosophy of life was being recapitulated. Sometime before she would branch off on the always entertaining subjects she would give a silvery chuckle to herself.

She was one of her kind, a bucolic bride and groom, accompanied by the usual train of sisters and cousins, came bustling in and then went out again. Not once did I see the woman raise her eyes, but the moment they did she shut the door behind them and showed a pair of twinkling gray eyes above the heavy spectacles and said:
"Don't it beat all how women can love some men? Did you see that lanky coddler come in here then? Well, he's a high neighbor of mine and a good, hard worker, but that little fool married him fur! Like as not he won't be here before long."

The bridegroom in question was about the most awkward individual infamous, and was topped off with hair that rivaled the sunset in the Bernon hills. His clothes were fearfully and wonderfully made, but in this particular he had the advantage of the bride, for she was clothed (we started to say "dressed") in exactly the same kind of dry goods, and she was wearing a country folks in their exaggerated stage makeup.

The Bride's Costume.
She had a big white fascinator thrown around her shoulders, and as the day was warm she did like poor Sarah Maud Russell to put on a hat went to "Coral's Bird's Christmas Party," she left her hat at home. Around her streaked brown hair was a pink sash—that had been put on so as not to rumple it. A white dress and tan shoes were among other items of dress. She was pretty in spite of her hair, but "he" was an utter impossibility.

She chuckled the occupant of the big chair, "they say as love is blind, but I take it as that's a mistake—most girls see in their beaus a lot of things that they don't want to see."
"That fellow just hung around that sal all last winter and all this summer, and I expect she thought she had to marry somebody or be one of them peaky old maids all her hulla life."

We walked to the door to get a better glimpse of the newly wed, who had come to the train hours early, and caught them dead to rights holding hands, right before the crowd who usually gather early to see who's coming and going.

He stepped back behind the big glass doors to leave.
"Holding hands, I 'low, as like as not," commented the knitter. "Now she's looking at him like she 'lowed he was one of them feggers with turkey wings glued on his heels or one with the fig leaves around his head."
I laugh and wonder whether his head was exactly the way the poor, foolish little bride was looking, but the laugh came from every throat, and it was that—that that specimen of mankind posing as "Mercury" or anything that could possibly warrant a wreath of
"fig leaves."

Just then the door was opened by a little runt of a man—the kind that wouldn't know whether his head or his bunions were hurting him, so short and stumpy was he. He didn't say a word and mother went on knitting and talking.

Must Be Loved.
"Yes," colloquized she, "yes, that's winnin'-folks for you; they jest got to be loved by somebody and they takes most anything that comes along and loves 'em, and if it's just a poor runt or a poor lanky article that no one else will love she takes him in."
"I 'low, 'low, 'low, 'low, 'low, 'low, 'low, just so you'd love 'em like some poor folks love a homeless yaller cur—don't you 'low 'em?"

We "lowed" that it looked that way, and then the train came and she thrust her knitting into a capacious pocket under her black alpaca apron and said: "Hiram, open the door for the lady; can't you see she wants to get out?" In the coach with "Hiram" she modded confidentially to me and said:
"I reckon you know why I knowed about 'em there she jerked her head to indicate the bride and groom behind her—well there she gave a not unloving look at the man who could easily have untied his shoestrings with his teeth—I was that gal once—good-bye—Hiram, raise your hat to the lady—don't your got no manners to speak of?"

"What are you dreaming about?"
said a friend, arousing me from my side-track reverie.
"I was wondering if the little bride

Disciples of John Lofting Meet.
This season has started off blithely enough for the Loftings.
There have been several entertainments already and many more are eagerly awaiting their time when they can be hostesses.

Mrs. Thomas P. Averill and Mrs.
Marvin Averill were the hostesses yesterday and extended the most charming hospitality to the club members and a few invited guests.

The parlors and dining-rooms were decorated with quantities of green ferns, palms and ivy, and used in profusion.

A very faint attempt was made at sewing, for as Mrs. Averill's wife is pressed it, "I didn't bring my knitting—have so much of that to do at home."

Little Misses Rebecca and Mary Nash Averill assisted their mother in serving a delicious salad course to the guests.

The menu was being most animately discussed Mrs. Thomas Averill and Miss Rebecca Averill rendered some sparkling duets of "Auld Syne" for the pleasure of the company.

Mrs. Crum, of Texas, who is at present the guest of her daughter, Mrs.
W. Hill; Mrs. Arch Dunlap and Mrs.
Neville Garrett were among the invited guests.

Silver Loving Cup To Mrs. Hall.
Mrs. Tom Hall has won the silver loving cup offered by the golf club, for keeping the finals for this handsome trophy were played off on Wednesday at the Country Club links and the contestants narrowed down to two, Mrs.
Hall and Mrs. Charles Saffell.

Mrs. Hall was returned the champion and was awarded the cup. Mrs.
Saffell, who, by the way, is nothing of a "slouch" at golf, is what a true sportsman calls a "good loser," and on this occasion she was the first to congratulate Mrs. Hall, who is what a very small caddy at the links yesterday called a "dead game spot."

Mrs. Hall is to be reckoned with at bridge, and she has proven what she can do with a rubber, but a little pile of sand and a good breeze.

Heatt-Kennedy.
Miss Elizabeth Heatt and Mr. Ike
A. Kennedy surprised their friends last week by slipping off to Lexington and having a beautiful, if quiet, wedding.

They were married at the home of a mutual friend, Miss Sarah Landers, by the Rev. Charles Lee Reynolds, of the Lexington Presbyterian church. Miss Heatt was married in a dainty, embroided mull gown, cut in princess, and carried an armful of white chrysanthemums.

After the ceremony and a delicious luncheon the bride and groom left over the Southern for Louisville, where they spent several days.

The bride, who is of the dainty, Dreder order of femininity, is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Heatt.
Mr. Kennedy is with the Hoge-Montgomery Company of this city, and is a nephew of Mr. A. Y. Ford, of Louisville.

MRS. PANKHURST,

English Suffragette, Makes Good In Washington.

HER GRACE AND STYLE CAPTIVATES HEARERS.

AVIATION EXHIBITIONS NOW PAD IN SOCIETY.

POINTS ABOUT KENTUCKIANS.

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.) Washington, Nov. 12.—It takes a pretty Congressman's wife to work the trick. Let's withdraw that sentence for repairs and try again. A pretty Congressman couldn't possibly have a wife, because there never was a pretty Congressman. How's this?

It takes the pretty wife of a Congressman to know how to manage matters maritally with neatness and finesse. Here is a recent exploit of one of these Machiavellian madams, one of the biggest hearted and most fascinatingly delightful women who ever steered the political bark of an admiral down the domestic side of things in Washington. Because, of course, it's the women who really do things. You just ought to hear Mrs. Pankhurst. She'll convert you to the force of that, if you aren't already converted.

Letter of Congressman's Wife.

The husband of this particular effectual Congresswoman was recently skylarking around with the Taft procession; of course, taking in the great Waterway Convention at New Orleans with gusto and a sanguine soul. He represents a watery State. The wife held down the domestic side of things in Washington in his absence and watched the children go to school. And this is what she wrote him:

My Dearest Arthur—It does me good to think how you are enjoying your delightful experiences on the Mississippi River trip. I know in your dear old loving heart you are planning to bring me a beautiful souvenir from that quiet city of New Orleans, which I have so often longed to visit. And so I want to tell you in a hurry, darling, that I've bought my New Orleans present myself right here in Washington. Every Washington woman's ambition now is for a time pet aeroplane of her very own.

All personal friends of the Wright brothers are besieged with requests to be introduced to the doughty aeronauts.

woman is that there's so much woman about her.

Mrs. Pankhurst's Argument.

Proclaimed Mrs. Pankhurst, that famous leader of English suffragettes, from the platform in Washington the other night: "You men say that we use our woman's wit to gain our points. Of course we do, and we shall continue to use it until we gain the vote to use in its stead. What else is there for us?"

Washington received Mrs. Pankhurst and her equal-rights crusade with great enthusiasm. Her influence was immediately in operation. A house-to-house canvass was made during the noted English woman's visit here, for masculine signatures to the woman suffrage cause. And the men weren't a bit skerry about lending their indorsement, either. Men are really improving.

Sketch of Mrs. Pankhurst.

Mrs. Pankhurst personally is like a portrait of a lady done by an old master. She is dainty and highbred and sprightly in aspect. In her life-work she has fought with wild beasts at Ephesus and been imprisoned for four months in London because she spoke out in meeting from the gallery during a session of Parliament, and demanded that her equal-rights petition be read. She was formerly Mrs. Minor-Morris and incarcerated for her crime.

The gentle little celebrity with soft gray hair and modest dress, is not superior to the poise of a woman's always looking just as well as she possibly can; that's her duty—addressed a large audience impressively in a most effective costume of violet velvet on train, out on modified Empire lines. She wore handsome jewelry and was charmingly womanly.

Notable American Suffragettes.

Among the women here in active cooperation with Mrs. Pankhurst are Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, lawyer, philanthropist, eminent in educational circles, daughter of the Mr. Spencer famed as the inventor of the "Spencerian" style of penmanship; Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, one of the eight founders of the national organization of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the heads of the various women's organizations of the District; Mrs. Cora Bacon Foster, of Texas, writer and lecturer; Mrs. Silas Hare, of Texas, and many other notable women from all sections of the country.

Air Flights Now the Fad.

All roads lead to quaint, historic Padensburg nowadays and College Park, Maryland, where the Government school of aviation is doing business. We are all aeroplanes. Washington has grown blasé on terrestrial flight. It wants to touch only the high places. Society has grown flighty. Every Washington woman's ambition now is for a time pet aeroplane of her very own.

who dodged all that sort of thing as they would the plague. Mobs by hundreds would not touch her in a twinkling, a "peek" at both air craft and masters. There's scarce a pretty woman who doesn't in her secret soul long to be a passenger on the wings of the Wrights on some ethereal trip.

Wright Brothers Sabbatarianism.

The moral influence of the Wright brothers is as certainly bent as an aeroplane with a ten-foot pole on Sunday and the holiday-seekers who crowd to College Park on the day of rest in the hopes of spectacular performances and shorter of car fare for their pains.

Thousands of grateful men and women have accepted this offer, secured the free trial of treatment of DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills, and now state that they are free from every trace of the dreaded disease that was sapping their lives away.

Miss Pennebaker's Party.

A pending social event in Washington of great interest to Kentuckians, both here and at home, is the debut tea which will take place on the 10th of December, Miss Lucinda Carpenter Pennebaker, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Darwin Pennebaker, of 2021 Q street, Georgetown, D. C., both of the Bluegrass State and of the most brilliant social connections.

Miss Pennebaker, a girl in her teens and scarce out of the schoolroom, is endowed with exceptional charm. She is as pretty as a picture, petite, piquant, with masses of red brown hair and eyes that harmonize and a delicate, rose-leaf skin. She is effective in costume and bearing and most cordially winsome in manner—a thoroughbred through and through and a Kentuckian to the manner born. Miss Pennebaker took a premature peep into society last winter and was an instant success, when she was a student at the National Cathedral School, when, together with the handsome young daughter of the Hon. Ben Johnson, of Bardonia, she assisted Mrs. Johnson at that lady's various receptions at the Hotel Cochran and attended a few private dances. Miss Pennebaker is in hopes that Miss Nancy Johnson will arrive in Washington in time to take part in her coming-out party.

Fair Maids To Assist.

The fair debutante expects to be further assisted by her cousin, Miss Emily Elliott, of Henderson, Ky., who made many friends here while a student at Chevy Chase College, near Washington; her cousin, Miss Catherine, of Louisville; her cousin, Miss Evelyn Carpenter, of Capital Hill, herself a debutante, whose father, Pay Director Carpenter, is formerly from Louisville; by Miss Winifred Darran, of Philadelphia; by Miss Stella Carrol, another debutante, whose father, Col. Charles D. Pennebaker, U. S. A., of Louisville, is in uniform as of this season's buds.

The Pennebaker Home.

The Pennebaker home, in aristocratic, historic Georgetown, has all the amplitude of space of a colonial mansion, and is peculiarly adapted to a brilliant entertainment. It is full of rich tapestries, brought from Kentucky, among them a rare old mahogany sideboard, which belonged to the greatest-grandfather on the maternal side of the prospective debutante, Judge Samuel Carter, of Louisville. There is an oil painting of the young lady's grandfather, Col. Charles D. Pennebaker, U. S. A., of Louisville, in his uniform as of this season's buds.

Prof. Edmund Harrison and Mrs. Harrison, of Louisville, have been the guests in Richmond, Va., of their daughters, Mrs. Dave Rucker and Mrs. Howard Hoge.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Atkins, of Mt. Pleasant, Washington, who formerly Miss Margaret Brent, of Lexington, are the guests of Mrs. Atkins' mother, Mrs. Mary Moore Brent, at Forest Retreat near Lexington.

SPIC AND SPAN

Louisville Fairly Shines Following "Clean-up."

LOADS OF TRASH CARTED TO THE DUMP.

WOMAN'S OUTDOOR LEAGUE IS WELL PLEASED WITH WORK.

CRUSADE MOST SUCCESSFUL.

The two days' crusade against trash and rubbish conducted Friday and Saturday with a vengeance by prominent women of Louisville affiliated with the Woman's Outdoor Art League came to an end yesterday when the factory whistles on the outskirts signalled the yeoman to rest from his hard day of toil. It was one of the most successful crusades that the local organization has conducted since it sprang into existence several years ago. All the officers and members of the organization and a number of officials in the street-cleaning department were smiles of satisfaction and expressed most enthusiastic opinions about the appearance of the city when the work was done.

Debris of every character had been carted away from the alleys and public streets to the city dumps during the two days that the campaign was in progress. Thousands of property owners entered into the spirit of the movement from the start and their premises were beautified and made attractive. Quite a lot of the trash is still out in piles in alleys and by-roads, owing to the inability of the street-cleaning department to clear it all away yesterday, but this will have disappeared by 6 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

Pleased With Results.

Harry T. Crittenden, superintendent of the street-cleaning department, was highly gratified at the results shown yesterday afternoon when he took it upon himself to make inquiries and personal observations. Mr. Crittenden stated that the people of Louisville seemed this year to take a deeper interest in the work of the organization than they have in the past and he believes that every man, woman and child in the city will volunteer to co-operate in the work of cleaning the city in a very few more years.

According to Mr. Crittenden, the street-cleaning department placed at the disposal of the organization during the two days of the campaign over seventy-five weapons and vehicles, including ashcans. With these Mr. Crittenden commissioned thirty-five or forty men to clean up every speck of dirt in the various districts to which they were assigned.

The Woman's Outdoor Art League is deserving of glowing praise. The members of the organization, nearly 100 in number, scattered broadcast over the city on the first day and urged the people to get busy and clean up. They encountered by any of the organization's members at any time, for property owners and tenants of rented houses had been notified and enlightened on the scheme far in advance, and consequently they went to work with a will.

All Good and Tired.

All those who took an active part in the crusade were tired and out when the campaign came to a close yesterday. They had been scouring the city from end to end for thirty long hours, but not a murmur of complaint was heard, for they appreciate the fact that it was all in a good cause. They retired to their homes when night fell over the city last evening, well satisfied that their time and efforts had been well spent.

Mrs. John A. Stratton, a prominent officer and member of the league, had a strenuous time of it during the campaign, but like all her associates, she was pleased with the results attained. Mrs. Stratton announced that the league sent out 60,000 notices this year, 30,000 of which went to the school children, 6,000 to members of the Louisville police department and the balance to members of the organization to distribute among residents of the city.

A part—usually a small part—of one week's room rent, spent for persistent furnished room advertising, will find a desirable tenant.

HOW HE CURED HIS CATARRH

I wrote you some time ago, giving you an account of my sufferings with an awful case of Catarrh. I had all the symptoms which accompany this disease, such as mucus dropping back into the throat, a constant desire to "hawk and spit," feeling of dryness in the throat, cough and spitting upon arising, scabs forming in the nose which required much effort to blow out, sometimes causing my nose to bleed and leaving me with a headache. I had thus suffered for five years, all the time trying different local treatments of inhalations, snuffs, douches, etc., with no real good effect. Of course I was greatly discouraged. As soon as I heard from you I commenced S. S. S. as you advised and after using it a short while noticed a change for the better. I continued to take it believing the trouble was in the blood, and S. S. S. made a permanent cure for me. I am now entirely free from Catarrh.

JUDSON A. BELLAM.

224 Randolph St., Richmond, Va.

The symptoms Mr. Bellam describes in his case of Catarrh are familiar to every one who suffers with this disease. For five years he had endured the discomfort and suffering, and was greatly discouraged as one treatment after another failed to cure him. When at last he realized that Catarrh is a blood disease, he knew that the former treatments had been wrong, and only a blood purifier like S. S. S. could produce permanent good results.

Catarrh is not merely an affection of the mucous membranes; it is a deep-seated blood disease in which the entire circulation and greater part of the system are involved. It comes from impurities accumulating in the circulation, and as the blood goes to every portion of the body the catarrhal matter irritates and inflames the different mucous surfaces and tissues causing an unhealthy and inflammatory discharge, and producing the other well known symptoms of the trouble.

The failure of local treatment to produce permanent good results in Catarrh is due entirely to the fact that such measures do not reach the cause of the trouble. Temporary relief and comfort may often be had by using some douche or inhalation, but no cure can be effected until the blood is purified of the irritating cause.

S. S. S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all impure catarrhal matter, and at the same time building up the system by its unequalled tonic effects. It goes down into the circulation and removes every trace of foreign matter or impurity. In other words S. S. S. cures Catarrh by purifying the blood so that the mucous surfaces and linings of the body are all supplied with healthy blood instead of being irritated and diseased from a continual saturation of catarrhal impurities. Then the inflamed and irritated membranes heal, the discharge is checked, the head noises all cease, the stomach is toned up, the throat is no longer clogged with phlegm, but every annoying symptom of the disease is corrected. There is but one way to cure Catarrh—purify the blood, and there is but one absolutely safe and sure blood purifier—S. S. S. We have a special book on Catarrh; we will send this book, and also any special medical advice desired free to all who write.

R. E. SPEER TELLS OF EDUCATIONAL, SOCIAL AND RELIGIOUS CONDITIONS IN SOUTH AMERICA

All Stand In Great Need of Re-enforcement From Outside, According To His Statement.

Educational, social and even religious conditions in South America stand in great need of re-enforcement from the outside, according to statements made by Robert E. Speer, who has just returned from six months' study of them. Mr. Speer is one of the secretaries of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, and went to South America in his official capacity. He had previously traveled in every part of the East, from Persia to India, China, Korea and Japan. He visited every part of the South American continent, the coasts at least, and had letters which secured for him entry into many grades of official and unofficial society.

Mr. Speer is conservative by temperament, and has rarely upon his return from official visits to foreign fields reported other than in a careful and guarded way. He maintains the same attitude at this time, but admits that South American morals, and in some respects its education, are so much worse than he had imagined they were that he has quite surpassed previous reports and surprised his friends by his utterances. Persia and China are far outclassed he thinks, and he says that the difference between the two Americas, North and South, is so great as to make it hard to believe that they are parts of the same civilization.

The student bodies of Rio and Buenos Ayres, two of the great educational centers of the continent he believes to stand in greater need than do the confessedly heathen bodies of Tokyo, the great educational center of Japan, or that of Calcutta, the center of learning in India.

Methods that ought to have been abandoned fifty years ago are still in use. Courses of study that were obsolete here thirty years ago are still being permitted at all, are being followed.

Matter of Morals.

In the matter of morals he found conditions hardly better than those in education. In one country, where were public records of collected men in the army, there was shown the fact whether enlisted men were of pure or not born blood. And the startling thing shown was the fact that hardly more than half were born under moral conditions. From official reports, collected in each country he visited, he concludes that from one-fourth to one-half of all the people of the continent are born out of wedlock.

In Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Colombia Mr. Speer looked into the question of the public schools, or as he puts it, the lack of them and of their support. In the Argentine and Chile he expected to find education in a public sense most advanced, and he was not prepared for the vast illiteracy which he declares obtains. In Chile the strains of Spanish and Indian mixed have left the Indian dominant in appearance and in characteristics, including the aversion to real education. Even in Chile he found more than half the people unable to read and write, while in Bolivia, Peru and Colombia the proportion ran even higher, 80 per cent. in some of the countries.

The visit to South America was made in part to look after Presbyterian interests, and incidentally to be able to give a careful opinion upon the needs of missions in Roman Catholic countries. The World Missionary Conference, to meet in Edinburgh, Scotland, next year, there has been some discrimination against those occupied by Roman Catholics and some question as to whether delegates were to be encouraged to come from them. The feeling is said to be that out and out heathen lands are more needed, and it is even held in some quarters that Protestant missionaries had perhaps better not venture into lands where Roman Catholics are at least so long as there are so many other fields.

Protestant Missionaries.

Mr. Speer returns with the conviction that Protestant missionaries ought to be commissioned for South American countries in far larger numbers than they are. He does not criticize the action of the Edinburgh conference authorities, but is inclined to think that Protestants in South America have more to do than the Edinburgh people accorded them. He deplores the lack of Bible circulation, and the burning of Bibles in the streets, which he declares is still practiced. He feels sure that not only morals, education and religion get upon a better basis there much hope for improvement in political or even in business conditions and progress.

Especially interested was Mr. Speer, as he reports, in transportation and other material conveniences in Colombia. He went over certain roads to and from Bogota, and declares that he found nothing worse in Persia. In a talk which he gave immediately upon leaving his ship after his arrival home he uttered sentiments that would delight the hearts of the good roads advocates. He allowed that everything is not perfect in North America, but that our transportation in perfection itself compared with the awful conditions obtaining in Colombia.

There is a progressive Presbyterian church in Brazil, but some time ago it was rent into factions over the Masonic question. A difference of element among Brazil Presbyterians developed that Masons be not admitted to church membership. The difference was healed to some extent. In Colombia the Presbyterians are the only Protestant body at work, and Mr. Speer hopes that larger assistance may be furnished from this end in future. He believes that if adequate help be given at this time Colombia, which he found a most attractive country, can be changed within a few years. Missionaries throughout the entire continent have been depressed by the decision of the Edinburgh conference authorities, and they have expressed fears that their work might be discontinued or even withdrawn. Mr. Speer returns convinced beyond doubt that Protestant efforts on this continent must be re-enforced, and that North America would be ready if she longer neglected her twin continent in this hemisphere.

Millions For Religious Purposes.

Thirty millions of dollars to religious purposes from one man at one time is the largest yet. That sum, given by John S. Kennedy, of New York, the other day, was divided among education and missions in about equal parts. That given to the Presbyterian mission boards, $2,250,000 to each of them, or $6,750,000 to all of them, has raised a question of administration in at least two of them that will be decided the next time they annually meet. Mission boards are proverbial for falling into debt, as everybody knows. Budgets are made out eighteen months in advance, when it is impossible always to tell what may be financial conditions during the year covered.

The question now raised is whether it may not be wise for the missions during the coming year to be supported wholly out of the Kennedy gift, permitting the gifts from churches, individuals and legacies to accumulate. The exact amount of their accumulation will be the amount to be expended the succeeding year, while more gifts from the churches and others pile up. In other words, money given one year is expended the next. There can then be no falling into debt, as everybody knows. The churches desire enlargement of work all they need do is to increase their gifts. Some members of one of the boards involved, possibly others, fear that if the churches and individuals are relieved for one whole year from actual expenditures their interest will lag. The problem is a nice one, never yet solved.

Endowment Funds.

Time was when mission boards feared that the possession of large invested funds might attract adversely the gifts from churches. That is no longer the case when one board received a large sum by gift some years ago. It promptly gave away every dollar of it. It is now a few years, twenty at most, prominent missionary societies have accumulated endowment funds to a considerable extent. Such accumulation is known, and the statement is believed that the effect upon gifts is not to cause them to withhold gifts as not being needed. Others have been educated or else the former apprehensions of board officials were groundless.

Presbyterian boards now in receipt of the large Kennedy funds had not till now as many millions in endowments as have some other missionary societies. The two principal boards, the home and foreign, had only about $1,000,000 each, and even some of that movement was tied up with conditions of gift. The American Board, the oldest of American societies, has a large endowment. The Episcopal board has a little more than $2,000,000, and the Baptists are fairly well off, the Home Mission Society North having a successful plan on which it pays annuities. The principal reverting to the society at death.

The Kennedy gifts to the Presbyterians, amounting in all to over $10,000,000, and it can be expended at once if the men in authority decide so to do. For years Presbyterian boards now helped have announced at the end of their years, and immediately before the meeting of the General Assembly, that they have come out ahead in receipts, all bills met. For years, also, and almost wherever it was necessary, it was this same Mr. Kennedy who made up deficiencies, and made possible the hopeful announcements. Mr. Kennedy built the Presbyterian building in New York by far the finest structure owned by any of the missionary societies in any city, and his benefactions to other objects before his death were enormous. It has been said of late that church people had ceased to give to church and interested themselves in ethical and moral causes. On top of the statement comes the largest benefaction of all, and that to strictly missionary and religious purposes.

Two Problems Considered.

The trustees of the fifth-avenue Baptist church, New York, the congregation of which John D. Rockefeller, father and son, are members, gave careful consideration to two very important problems in a recent meeting. The first was the question of a new place of worship. That a new place had to be provided was evident from the crowds that attend upon the preaching of the Rev. English minister, the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked.

One of the problems, of widest interest, was that of the future of the church. They decided that there are in New York all of the large churches that are needed. At any rate, they decided against a large church for themselves. Not only do they say that the large church may become a burden if a popular preacher departs, but that it is the small and not the large congregation that is more effective in inculcating religious truths, in securing gifts and in getting work done. The tendency has been to create the largest and financially the strongest church possible. Here comes a great congregation, plenty of money, declaring in favor of the small church and completely reversing the old idea.

The other problem is that of location. The present church is just off Fifth avenue, on Forty-sixth street. Time was when it was thought downtown. With the building of the new library at Forty-second street, and because of some other changes, this region is now considered most desirable. It is held by New York leaders in real estate, in educational and religious matters, that forever this part of Manhattan Island will remain as it now is. That is, that the uptown movement is at an end, hence the decision to rebuild upon the old site.

There is, in a way, still another decision of these trustees that will interest it. It is to build a plain edifice. With millions at command, if they want them and these coming not all from the Rockefeller by any means, these trustees decide to erect a structure that has about it nothing whatever for show. Their decision in this regard will be understood when it is stated that the cost is limited to $400,000 for an edifice that is to be 100x100 feet and more than 125 feet in height.

New President Takes Charge.

The new president of Peabody University at Nashville, the Rev. George A. Gates, who was just elected during the American Missionary conference at Burlington, has entered upon his work, and made his first formal address to the students and faculty of the university. It was under the association named, which founded it, and the new head has the task of putting it upon its feet as an independent institution. Peabody is almost as famous for its jubilee singers as for its educational work, but the quartet is so excellent that it does not mind comparisons. Its field is the higher education of negro men and women who are to be the leaders for the race. Some of the foremost people in politics, in education, in philanthropy and in business in the South among the colored people are graduates of the Nashville University.

Peabody University, having this purpose of colored race leadership in mind, was established immediately after the close of the Civil War. It is now supplied with an admirable campus and prime student buildings, but its endowment is wholly inadequate to its needs. It is to observe the close of its first fifty years of existence in 1916, and between the present and that date the new president is to undertake the task of securing an endowment of $500,000. Dr. Gates is a Dartmouth man, but for ten years or more has been at the head of Pomona College in California.

Dr. HENRY ALFORD PORTER, will discuss "The Unsearchable Riches of Christ," and his evening subject will be "Finding Our Lost Stars."

In the fall of 1907 Dr. Porter was called from Oklahoma City, where he had led in the building of the White Temple, one of the most notable churches in the Southwest, to fill the pulpit made vacant by the death of Dr. T. T. Eaton. During the past two years Dr. Porter has filled a large place not only in Walnut-street Baptist church, but in the city of Louisville, and particularly in Baptist circles. His influence and the impulse of his tireless energy has been felt throughout the South.

Large and steadily growing congregations attend his ministry, and every department of the church has been benefited. There have been 210 additions to the church since his coming—660 if the 150 members added through the four missions of the Walnut-street

Why Don't You Furnish That Little Home Now

We've a Way and a Little Plan To Help You.

We've the things you want, every needed thing to make that little home just as cozy and comfortable as it is possible to make it; everything for every room in your home.

A little visit to the store will convince you that for goods of real worth, our prices are the lowest in Louisville, and then our little "payment plan" will prove a mighty convenient aid.

It takes a lot of money to furnish a home complete and pay for it all at once; more than most of us are able to accumulate. That accumulation is not necessary, if you will but take the Rhodes-Burford store into your confidence. They'll arrange the payments so that you can pay a little down, the balance in an easy, satisfactory way.

A. O. H. NIGHT AT THE HOPKINS THEATER TUESDAY.

Members of This Organization To Greet Barney Gilmore, the Irish Comedian.

Tuesday night will be known as "A. O. H. night" at the Hopkins. Manager Edward W. Dustin has made this designation because of the fact that most of the members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, led by State President George J. Butler, County President Patrick Walsh and their respective staffs are expected to attend the Market-street theater on that occasion.

They are coming, primarily, to greet Barney Gilmore, who is a prominent member of the A. O. H., and, otherwise, to see this popular Irish comedian in his new play, "Dublin Dan, the Irish Detective." Mr. Gilmore has agreed to give a grand series of stereoscopic views of Ireland as a special feature for his engagement at the Hopkins this week. These views were secured by Mr. Gilmore himself on a recent tour of his native country, and are said to give a grand description of the main points of interest in the Emerald Isle. He will display these pictures, accompanied by an explanatory lecture, at each performance here of his play.

LITERARY MEETING AT JEWISH SYNAGOGUE.

The first literary meeting of the Young Men's Club and the Irish Society, of the Adath Jeshurun Congregation, will take place tonight, in the vestry-room of the synagogue, Flood and Chestnut streets. Alvin T. Shapinsky will deliver an address on "The Desirability of Assimilation for the Modern Jew," which will be followed by a discussion. An attractive musical programme also will be presented, including among which will be Violin solo, "Home, Sweet Home," by Miss Josephine Schaeffer; Piano solo, "Lange's Flower Song," by Miss Gertrude Schaeffer; Violin solo, "Intermezzo from Cavaleria Rusticana," by Miss Josephine Schaeffer.

Democrats Watching Race For Congress In Third.

GEORGE VOIGT, OF JEFFERSONVILLE, IN LIMELIGHT.

PEOPLE OF INDIANA WILL REPEAL COUNTY OPTION LAW.

HAS PROVEN BIG FAILURE.

Indianapolis, Nov. 13.—(Special).—Indiana's Democratic and Republican ranks are watching the congressional situation in the Third district have virtually conceded the nomination of George Voigt, of Jeffersonville. The election of James Burke as Mayor of Jeffersonville and the effective work done by Voigt in landing him in the place are looked upon as final steps toward a complete reconciliation of the warring Democrats in that territory, and from now on an unbroken battle line against the Republicans is promised. The district is safely Democratic, but the divisions in the Democratic ranks have always been so sharp that the Republicans from time to time counted on strength for their ticket because of the differences. This time, the tip has gone out, there is no line of demarcation, and there is no need for the Republicans to hope to benefit from and disaffectation among their enemy.

Voigt's Chances Look Good.

Voigt has always been listed as one of the strongest factionalists in the district and a power in Clark county. Jeffersonville, with Indianapolis, Terre Haute and a number of other cities, in the recent municipal campaign was so handled by the Democrats that the Democratic lines are held to have disappeared entirely, and now the big fellows in Indianapolis freely predict that in the next district convention Clark county will be one solid mass of Democratic shouting and working for Voigt.

Voigt is considered one of the best politicians in Southern Indiana, and his work for Burke is considered one of his masterpieces, since it has healed a thousand old hurts and has cemented the Democrats of the county. It is understood in Indianapolis that the Third district Democrats are giving Voigt his full dues in the situation. Voigt has long wanted to go to Congress, but has never yet felt that he would be able to pull under the wire. He was announced some time ago that he would give W. E. Cox, the present Congressman and a candidate for reelection, a run for his money. Hereafter he has remained out of the race, but now it is understood here, he is in the light for a finish, and if the Democrats of the State were betting they would place their money on him.

Lamb In Race For Senator.

John E. Lamb, of Terre Haute, a candidate for the United States Senate in the recent session of the General Assembly, and a power in the Fifth district, is taking a great deal of interest in State politics at this time. It being his purpose to make the race again in 1911, Lamb, in getting in early, is seeking to have the Democratic State Central Committee line up as he would like it in order to have as much as possible to say concerning the election of the members of the next General Assembly. He is looking to Gov. Marshall to head a movement to land a central committee which will not be dominated by the Taggart interests and which will be as free from brewery influence as possible. Marshall has no objection to feeling for his brewer who tries to dominate either the Republican or the Democratic party for the furtherance of his brewery end, and is in absolute sympathy with Lamb on this proposition. Lamb came out with banners flying from the municipal campaign in Terre Haute, where there were two Democratic runnings against a Republican, and elected not only his man for Mayor but landed the other administrative offices. In this he was opposed to Crawford Fairbanks, the president of the Terre Haute Brewing Company, who is an old political enemy of Lamb's, and who is said to have given him the "double cross" in the senatorial fight last winter, thus making it possible for him to command in the General Assembly to B. F. Shively, the successful candidate. Lamb's old animosity to Fairbanks is heightened by the incident, and since then his scolding pen has been unrelenting whenever the Fairbanks interests have been concerned.

Against Brewery Control.

Lamb would like to see the central committee made up of progressive young Democrats who have never been accused of being in the Taggart camp and who would not present vulnerable points to the argument that they are in any way brewery controlled.

Not a little sentiment over the State at this time is being found in support of Lamb's feelings in this respect. It is said that in this city plans are on foot in a number of wards to organize anti-Taggart clubs, with the hope of throwing aside the Taggart influence as far as Marion county, the Seventh district, is concerned when it comes to selecting a district congressman. The attempt has caused a sharp division among Indianapolis Democrats. The old friends of Taggart are not inclined to throw in the towel, and are declaring that they will stand by him loyally. The agitators who are back of the organization are declaring that with all Taggart's misstatements the fight for a committee in the Seventh district will probably be one of the hardest fought in the State.

Next Republican Committee.

Early plans for selection of the Republican Central Committee are said to be progressing rapidly, although no one can yet be found who is ready to give out the names of anyone agreed upon. One man, who declared that he knew, presently refuses to give out the names of the list. The list included a "wet" man from every district. The significance of the move is now being studied by the Democrats, who understand that the next Republican central committee is to be a "wet" one, and they are alarmed at the prospect. Reports from the next Republican central committee are said to be a "wet" one, and they are alarmed at the prospect. Reports from the next Republican central committee are said to be a "wet" one, and they are alarmed at the prospect.

Republicans In League With Brewers

"The Republicans have always been in league with the brewers," he declared. "I have never seen a campaign that did not warm up to the liquor men, except their money, and throw the odium of the thing on the Democrats. The Republicans, and not the Democrats, have been responsible for the saloon conditions in Indiana as concerns politics, and the Democrats have always been the goat."

It is hard to believe, however, according to the leading politicians of the

AMONG the kings of the great New York garment makers is the firm from whom our agents buy many of our outer garments. Finding the warm weather continuing, and having an immense surplus stock, fully one-third was consigned to us, and the high-priced ones predominated. But we paid so much less for them than their actual cost that you will scarcely pay any more than the value of the materials. That's why these low prices are quoted.

—Misses Mariah Wilkerson, of Valley Station; Mary Jefferson, of Lexington; Annie and Lucy Taylor, of Lagrange; Sertha Current, of Margaret's Jurey; Carrie May Cassidy, Elizabeth Marks, Nannie and French Blackly, Helen Smier, Miss Lee Moody, Elvira Johnston, Ethel Collins, Daisy Edds, Pinkie Crum and Margie Belle Ryan.

The younger element reorganized their club of last year. Miss Elizabeth Current entertained them delightfully yesterday afternoon. Misses Ruth Ryan and Louise Johnson were guests. The regular members of the society are: Misses Alice Ross, Amelia Moody, Letitia Drane, Marjorie Floyd, Isabel Jefferson, Elizabeth Current and Cary Hoge; Messrs. Will Pryor, Caryle Jefferson, Norman Blackly, James Floyd, Howard Kirk, John B. Floyd, Herbert Ross and Clem Johnston.

—Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Collins have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel Collins, to Mr. Jennings Crum, the wedding to take place some time next month.

—Miss Elizabeth Hueston returned to Crescent Hill Wednesday after a visit to Mrs. D. Hadden.

The ladies of the Methodist church will give an oyster supper Saturday evening at Mrs. Henry Ellis.

LEXINGTON.

—Miss Mary Eliza Jefferson returned Thursday from Campbellburg, where she spent several weeks.

—Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Plicher and Mr. Simon N. Jones, of Louisville, were guests of the Rev. Clinton Quin and Mrs. Quin last Sunday.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Pryor, of Lagrange, spent Wednesday with Dr. R. B. Pryor and Mrs. Pryor.

—Mr. and Mrs. Dillard Hadden have returned from a visit in Louisville.

—David B. Wright was hostess at a charming reception given last Saturday afternoon in honor of her niece, Miss Laura Gaston Young, of Dixon Springs, Tenn. The house was beautifully decorated, cut flowers and pressed plants being used in profusion. The refreshment table had a handsome drawn work cover around which pink roses and anilaks were tastefully arranged, and a large vase of the roses was in the center of the table. Hot chocolate and dainty sandwiches were served, the sandwiches being tied with pink ribbon to further carry out the color scheme of pink and white. Miss Ruth Ryan presided at the table. Those assisting Mrs. Wright and the guest of honor in receiving were Mesdames Harry Stansifer, Carrie Crum, John DEER PARK.

—A church supper was given at the residence of Mrs. J. M. Bradley Thursday. It was quite a success socially, as well as financially.

—Mrs. Roy Wharton entertained twelve of her friends at a 6 o'clock dinner on Thursday evening.

—Mr. Claude Meredythe and family moved in their new home on Sherwood Thursday.

—The Boys' Covenantary Society was entertained at the residence of Mrs. John Kubaugh Friday evening by her son, Carl. The musical programme was very fine and refreshments were served during the evening.

—Mr. Lacey and wife, of Jeffersonville, were guests the first of the week of Mrs. George Becker.

—Mrs. James Hale, of Crescent Hill, was the guest of Mrs. W. S. Brown this evening.

—Mrs. George Ruffner and children were guests of Mrs. J. A. Miller on Friday evening.

—Mrs. J. L. Huffman was tendered a surprise party this week by her relatives and friends.

LOUISVILLE GIRL HOPES TO BECOME GREAT ARTIST.

Miss Schanzenbacher Returns From New York, Where She Spent Three Years.

Ambitious to succeed as an artist, Miss Nellie Schanzenbacher is working quietly in her studio at 1015 Jackson street. She has drawn and painted with an untiring love for her art since childhood, but with little or no instruction until three years ago, when she went to New York on money earned by years of conscientious painting. During her stay in New York she lived almost as a recluse. She studied under William M. Chase, F. Luis Moss, Edward Duffner, Frank Vincent, Du Mond and Robert Henri, and attracted the attention of masters and pupils, many of whom are now in the city.

—Mrs. John Jewell, accompanied by her mother-in-law, Mrs. Asa Jewell, whom she has been visiting, left Thursday for her home near Wilmore.

—Mrs. John McClintock and daughter, Miss Laura Johnson McClintock, left Wednesday for Yonkers, New York, where they will be the guests of Mrs. John Ten Eyck.

—Misses Jean Miller, Anne Clay McDowell and Anna Porter Berryman have returned from a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Berryman, at Elmhurst.

—Mr. Foxhall Daingerfield and Miss Elizabeth Daingerfield left Wednesday for a short trip to New York.

MISS NELLIE SCHANZENBACHER.

GREAT JURIST WHO IS STRONGLY HUMAN

CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER HAS FUND OF HUMOR AND IS NOT LONG ON DIGNITY

By JOSEPH EDGAR CHAMBERLAIN.

It is a great sight, in Washington, when circumstances at some rare social function put Chief Justice Melville Weston Fuller, the exalted successor of Jay, Marshall, Rutledge, Taney and the rest, side by side with Associate Justice John M. Harlan. Harlan, of course, was foreordained from the beginning of the world to be a Justice of the United States Supreme Court. His given name, John Marshall, marked him out for the place. Then his abilities, and a certain judicial grandeur that always characterized him, further suggested his fate. He was built on a liberal plan, physically and mentally. He is six feet three inches in height; he was born and bred in Kentucky, where his judicial abilities were early appreciated; and when a vacancy occurred on the supreme bench in 1877, there seemed to be nothing in the world for a complaisant President like Rutherford B. Hayes to do but to nominate Mr. Harlan to that vacancy, which he did.

Now, in many ways Chief Justice Fuller is the antipode of Mr. Justice Harlan. Harlan is the tallest man on the bench; the Chief Justice is the shortest. Harlan is always grave and impressive in his dignity. The Chief Justice is not especially strong on dignity; he has no grandeur of manner; it did not come to him by nature, and he has never tried to acquire it. His habitual look is one of quiet self-possession and there always lurks upon his face a look of humorous enjoyment of the world.

Dickens Enthusiast.

When Justice Shiras was on the bench he had a colleague who, like him, self, was saturated in the novels of Dickens; and the two used to get their

Wends together on the bench and compare the lawyers who appeared before them to characters in Dickens' novels. In the course of the eleven years that they were both on the supreme bench nearly all the well-known figures of Dickens rose to address the majesty of the court, from Wilkins Micawber to Silas Wegg, the man-with-wooden-legs, and all were named in a whisper by the two worthies on the bench.

The fact is that Chief Justice Fuller was born strongly human. The only really juicy natives of New England, according to a certain tradition, are those who were born either in the State of Maine (it is always "the State of Maine" to them) and in Vermont; and the justest Maine men are those who come from Augusta, the capital. Chief Justice Fuller was born in Augusta in 1833. There is nothing whatever in the way of character that can not be found in Augusta. The natives abound in humor, but seldom in dignity. They are actively intellectual, nearly every young man in the place takes to journalism or to the law, and many of them take to both.

Among the Augusta young men who took to journalism and to the law were Melville W. Fuller and James E. Blaine; and there was a time in that city when both were reporters on the rival daily papers—Fuller on the Democratic paper and Blaine on the Republican. From day to day they "scooped" and drubbed each other with great spontaneity in their respective papers, but personally they were very good friends, and they continued to be such as long as both were living. Fuller exchanged journalism for the law in 1855, when he was 23 years old. The next year he went to Chicago and hung out his shingle. Though he became a thorough Chicagoan, he never shrouded the New England accent, the New England tastes, nor the Augustan flavor. He is an extremely small eater—he never exercises, and he has to balance his physical inactivity with a low diet; but when he does eat, it is generally a New England boiled dinner, or boiled codfish and pumpkin pie.

His Baked Beans Menu.

In Washington they tell the story that the Fuller meal on Saturday night is baked beans with pork—nothing else, after the State of Maine fashion. One evening the Chief Justice, possibly forgetting that it was Saturday, asked a distinguished English jurist home to dinner with him. When the beans came on, the Englishman promptly declined them.

Mrs. Fuller showed some embarrassment, whereupon the Englishman amiably said, "Never mind, I'll make it up on the next course." "But good Lord!" exclaimed the Chief Justice, "there isn't any other course!" And there wasn't. From day to day, after twenty-one years on the Supreme bench, as he was when, as a lawyer, he had made his way, he lived in a suburb of Chicago, and went in and out every day on the Hyde Park train. My own first and closest personal contact with him was on that same Hyde Park train. Though Mr. Fuller was then in the prime of life, his hair was already somewhat gray, though with the corn-tassels of his youth and early manhood.

When He Commuted.

It was the custom in that early day for Hyde Park commuters to "visit" sociably all over the car. People had their own seats, which were conceded to the very common consent of the passengers. Fuller's seat was on the shady side of one of the cars, next the window. Passengers went from seat to seat, discussing the news in the morning paper; and pretty nearly everybody had had his conversational whack at Fuller before he got into the old Illinois Central station at the head of Michigan avenue. He always seemed to welcome the train riders, and probably laid down many ex-cathedra opinions there as he ever has on the Supreme bench. The fact that the majority of Hyde Park passengers were Republicans, while Fuller was a Democrat, gave him an opportunity to give a good deal of political stationery work.

He certainly had no political opponent in Chicago who did not respect and admire his ability, nor had he an acquaintance who did not acquire a considerable affection for him on account of his patient and friendly character. Nobody in Chicago was surprised when Cleveland made him Chief Justice in 1888, though some people in other parts of the country expressed a good deal of astonishment.

Mr. Fuller had always been a somewhat unconventional man. Blessed with a great shock of hair, he wore it long, like a Maine schoolmaster or singing-school teacher. To this adornment he added a large and drooping mustache, of which he always seemed to be proud. The whole country was agog to see whether the new Chief Justice, in defiance of every precedent and tradition of the Supreme Court, would continue to wear this mustache.

It was almost impossible to think of a Chief Justice of the Supreme Court with a mustache, but the country had to think of it. For Mr. Fuller shook the foundations of American jurisprudence by appearing not only in flowing robes but in his flowing mustache. And still the Government at Washington lived, and the constitutional guarantee remained unimpaired and ran up the black flag. Supreme Court Justices, since that time, have followed the precedent—Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes being conspicuous among them.

Inveterate First-nighter.

Another habit which the Chief Justice did not give up was his practice of attending first-night performances at the theaters. He is still one of the most inveterate first-nighters in Washington. Entering the theater always on such occasions in the nick of time, the Chief Justice rises, looks about and beams upon the audience expansively—and the performance, then goes on as if it had received a benediction.

Chief Justice Fuller has undergone severe criticism since he came to the supreme bench. In addition to a deep domestic sorrow of another sort, which might have broken the spirit of a weaker or less genial man, he has lost his wife, who was a devoted companion. But he has not allowed these sorrows to embitter him. He has remained smiling and courteous to his associates, and considerate to the members of the bar. He has been, no doubt, the best beloved of all the Chief Justices. He is popular with the lawyers. There is about him little of the stern and severity of the old-time judicial magistrate, though there is no lack of dignity about his court bearing.

In addition to being a very small eater, the Chief Justice is a moderate smoker of moderately-priced cigars. He is said to smoke the same kind of cigars, as far as they are obtainable, that he smoked when he was struggling hard to establish a living law business in Chicago in the old days. He says he is attached to these cheap cigars by ties of sentiment and tender recollection, and that nothing else would taste so good to him. There is nothing like flavoring your tobacco with fond memories—and a sense of humor.

Highly domestic in his tastes—except for the first nights at the theater—the Chief Justice is fond of dogs and birds. He is also an inveterate and constant reader. When social Washington would like to get at him, he is often in bed at home, and also deep in a book, and he may go on reading in bed until midnight.

Chief Justice Fuller's name is not especially associated with any immortal decision. It is not linked with any notable, jury decisions as that of his junior associate on the bench, Mr. Justice Brewer. One reason for that is that the Chief Justice, being a Democrat, has been in the minority of his own court on a number of key questions ever since he was appointed. Another reason is that, inasmuch as the duty of assigning a member of the court to write an opinion (where the members are agreed) devolves on the Chief Justice, it has often happened that he has very often given over to another the opportunity to write the opinion.

Perhaps Chief Justice Fuller will not rank in history with Jay, or Marshall, or Story. Even Taney's name will be found to have made more noise in the history books than his. But he will probably surpass all the Chief Justices in the record of his personal kindnesses and in his willingness to let another have the credit while he performs his simple duty. CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER AND A GRANDCHILD.

CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER AS SEEN ON THE STREETS OF WASHINGTON.

WOMEN PIRATES OF THE WEST INDIES.

Mary Reed and Anne Bonney Achieved Notoriety As Buccaneers.

It is all in the point of view. Poets have sung of the glories of Cleopatra, yet Cleopatra was a criminal. Historians point to Catherine as one of Russia's greatest rulers, yet Catherine was a savage. Elizabeth ranks high among the monarchs of England, yet Elizabeth was a ruthless creature who sent many men and women to the block and who signed the death warrant of her cousin, Mary, Queen of Scots, without a qualm or a quiver. In her humble way, Mary Reed was a Cleopatra, a Catherine and an Elizabeth. She had the romantic, adventurous disposition of the daughter of the Nile, the sturdy, masculine, soldierly qualities of the terrible Russian and the careless ways and volatile temper of the free-living Queen Bess. She was the greatest woman pirate of the world ever known and, like the three great queens, she was a creature of circumstance to a large degree. If she had any regret because, instead of piracy, a quiet home life and a loving husband had not been her destiny she did not give expression to it. In fact, she seemed to like her calling, and in a naive, philosophic sort of way she would argue on the justice and injustice of piracy and the beneficial effect hanging had upon keeping the ranks of the pirates from being overworked.

"Were it not for the fact that the rope dangles before their eyes as a menace," she remarked in a conversation with the judge who sentenced her to death, "all the cowards would turn pirate and so infest the seas that men of courage would starve." If I had my way I would not make the penalty for piracy anything less than death. It is the fear of the noose that has kept many miserable, cowardly rogues honest, and it is the fear of the noose, too, that keeps on land many of those who now rob the widows and the orphans and who oppress the poor who have no money to seek justice. If it were not for the noose the sea would be as crowded with rogues as the land and there would be so much plundering of ships that merchants, after a while, would not send vessels out except under the safest of armed escort.

"Under such conditions, my dear judge," she said gravely to the judge, "my trade in a little time would not be worth following."

Sentenced To Die.

It was at Port Royal, Jamaica, November 20, 1720, that Mary Reed was tried. Another woman pirate, Anne Bonney, was on trial with her, as were Capt. Rackam and eight men of Rackam's crew. The nine men and the two women were sentenced to death, and that same day Rackam and two of the men were taken to Gallows Point and hanged. So far as known, this is the only instance not only of women pirates being sentenced to death but of women pirates being brought to trial. It is recorded that the women showed a higher degree of courage in the presence of the judge than did the men companions, but that is not to be marvelled at, for the women had displayed far more bravery in the sea fight in which they were captured than did Rackam or any of the others. In fact, throughout the years in which the two women sailed with Rackam they were the sturdiest fighters on board. Had Rackam and his men had the same spirit as the women, the odds probably would have had a different ending.

Piracy was in its decadence in the day of Rackam, and Rackam probably would have received little or no notice in history but for Mary Reed and Anne Bonney. Morgan, prince of pirates, was dead. Roc, the Brazilian, had paid the penalty of his crimes; Bartholomew, L'Olonnois, De Lussan and the other commanders of the golden days of the buccaneers were memories only, but throughout the West Indies there were enough bands of sea robbers to make life lively for the Spaniard or any other captain who sailed those waters. Rackam had been quartermaster on the pirate ship commanded by Capt. Charles Vane, and when Vane, on November 24, 1718, was deposed for cowardice in refusing to attack a French man-of-war, Rackam was chosen captain in his place.

In the two years in which Rackam cruised around Cuba, Bermuda, the Bahamas, and made occasional raids along the Caribbean coast, Mary Reed was second in command and Anne Bonney was one of the crew. The pirates captured several vessels, attacked some small towns and got a fair amount of plunder, and made themselves so much of a menace that a pardon was offered to them and to all other pirates operating in the Gulf. If they would return to honest ways, a pardon was offered to the other pirates were glad of the opportunity to wash the slate clean, too, with Rackam and the women. They refused, and so became the mark for all the English, French and Spanish vessels of war that were in the West Indies.

It was early in November, 1720, that a small English warship sighted Rackam's brigantine off Jamaica. The two vessels were pretty well matched and in the early stages of the fight all the chances favored the pirates, but sea robbers never did have much stomach for fighting against the English and when one of the guns on the brigantine burst and it was necessary to close with the enemy if victory was to be achieved, Rackam rushed to his cabin and sought solace in the brandy bottle. In vain did Mary Reed and Anne Bonney plead with and threaten the rest. The example of the captain was too much for them. After firing a few more shots at the Englishman they too, sought refuge and solace in the cabin, all but one. This one remained on deck with the two women and the crew of the ship until the last. In one desperate effort to get the men back on deck Mary Reed went to the cabin door and, firing into the crowd, threatened death to every one of them who continued to act the coward. Her shot killed one man, but the others stuck to the cabin and refused to come out.

When the English swarmed on board she, in disgust, surrendered the brigantine, and thereafter both by the commander of the warship and by the civil authorities she was treated as the real head of the pirate band. Her contempt for Rackam and the rest of the men who shared by Anne Bonney, who was the captain's mistress. A short time before he was hanged Rackam got permission to see this woman to bid farewell to her. Instead of condoling with him she told him that if he had fought like a man in all probability he would have gone to the gallows. She was sorry for him, of course, but not sorry enough to shed tears. She besought him, however, to go to his death like a man and so wipe out as far as possible the memory of his craven conduct in the fight.

Rackam and the two men sentenced to die with him that day went to the gallows smilingly. The other men of the band were hanged in the February following, but although neither Mary Reed nor Anne Bonney sought or expected clemency the authorities refused to hang them. There was as much, if not more, of an abhorrence to inflicting the death penalty on women in those days as there is in these times, and as the stories of the two women pirates became known their conversations with the Port Royal judges, people came to look upon them as more sinned against than sinning. Mary Reed, it was learned, had been born in England and had been bred and reared in deception. Her mother, when very young, had married a youth who soon after their marriage went to sea and never returned. The fruit of this marriage was a son. A year later Mary was born, and, the son dying, Mary's mother decided to substitute her illegitimate child for the legitimate one in order to have the child come in for the wealth of her husband's mother. Mary, therefore, was reared as a boy. As she grew up her mother explained to her the secret of her birth and the necessity for concealing her sex. At various times the grandmother wanted to adopt the child, but this the mother, of course, would not consent to. Instead, each time she got the old woman to increase the allowance made on account of the child. Occasionally the mother and grandmother quarreled and, unfortunately for Mary, the old woman died at such a time and left Mary without a shilling. The child being no longer a source of income to her, the mother had no further use for Mary and so abandoned her.

Mary, garbed as a boy, reared as a boy and having had the companionship only of boys all her life, now could do nothing except look for work as a boy. She had the good fortune to obtain a position as footboy to a Frenchman of wealth, and she remained in this position several years. As she grew in years and strength she got tired of servile employment and began to look about for something else. Having a love for the sea and a touch of romance in her disposition she enlisted on a man of war. Here she learned enough of seamanship to fit her well for the part she was to play later on in life. After several cruises she sought adventure ashore and went to Flanders, where she enlisted in a regiment of infantry as a drummer. There was little chance for a poor soldier, no matter how brave or how daring, to advance in those days for commissions were bought and sold and the person without money might serve throughout life without promotion. Giving up the infantry in disgust, Mary next enlisted in a cavalry regiment. In this she distinguished herself so as to win the applause and esteem of all the officers of the regiment. Just then romance entered the life of Mary to bring confusion to her. She was very brave and she was very modest. She had the faculty of most brave persons of winning the affectionate regard of their companions. The tent companion of Mary was a handsome young Flemish trooper, who thought Mary was the bravest young man in the world. No wonder that Mary, her natural tendencies checked and distorted throughout her young life, should fall passionately in love with him. The violence of her feelings was such that she neglected all her soldierly duties and acted so peculiarly that she was considered insane.

One day when the handsome trooper was expressing his sorrow over her condition she astonished him by throwing herself into his arms and telling him she was a woman. But his astonishment was no greater than that of the entire regiment the next day when the two troopers were married in public. All the officers were present and so were thousands of citizens.

Married and dressed for the first time in her life in the clothes women wear Mary left the army and, with her husband, opened an inn, and for lack called it the Three Horseshoes. She had a fair measure of luck for a few years and was well on the road to prosperity and ease when her husband died, the wars ended, business fell off to little or nothing and she was left once more with the problem of making a living for herself.

There was not much opportunity for her in Europe, she thought. Anyhow the death of her husband had cut off all the ties that held her there, so she engaged passage for America in a French ship. For an unattached young woman to make the trip across the ocean in those days was unthought of, so for her own protection she resumed the garb of a man. The ship she sailed in was captured by English pirates, and as she was the only English-speaking person on board the pirates, after plundering the vessel and its passengers of everything of value, took her on board their craft and allowed the French ship to proceed. They had no idea she was other than she seemed to be—a fine, handsome, rosy-cheeked young Englishman—and she became one of the pirate crew. There was nothing else for her to do. She continued with the pirates for several months and then, the British Government having made one of its periodic offers to pirates to pardon those who would surrender, by a certain day, the crew availed themselves of the opportunity, went to Jamaica, were officially forgiven, and having sold their plunder to good advantage, proceeded to enjoy the fruits of their adventures.

When their money was spent they heard that Capt. Rodgers was fitting out vessels in the island of New Providence for privateering. This suited them admirably, so a fair number of them, among the lot being Vane and Rackam, offered their service to Rodgers.

"What else could I do?" Mary asked the judge when she got to this point in her narrative. "There was no way for an honest woman to make a living in Jamaica, as well you know, and even though I abhor bloodshed and crime I have the same love of life that every human creature has, and, wanting to preserve my life and get out of it everything I can, I was constrained to become a pirate once more because there was nothing else for me to turn to."

The ship fitted out by Rodgers hardly had sailed when Mary and her companions, who had sailed with her, were selected as Captain and Rackam quartermaster. For several years the pirates ranged the Gulf, preying on friend and foe. At times they had plenty, but more times they were poor. Then came the time when Vane was unwilling to give battle to a French warship and Rackam supplanted him as Captain. With the selection of Rackam as Captain there came to the pirate ship Anne Bonney, the woman to whom he was attached. She dressed in a mixed costume, half male, half female. In all the contests in which the brigantine engaged she was as resolute and as good a fighter as any man aboard. One of the queer things in connection with this strange pair of women is that it was through Anne Bonney that the sex of Mary Reed was discovered. Mary was no less modest than she was brave and no one on board suspected her as being other than she seemed. Anne Bonney, coarse and of a far different stripe from Mary, was much impressed by the rosy cheeks and dashing appearance of Mary, who aroused the jealousy of Rackam. The captain became so violent that Mary thought it prudent to reveal her secret to Anne.

But the secret was not to remain long a secret. Soon after the arrival of Anne Bonney aboard the brigantine captured a ship and among the prisoners taken was a young artist of engaging manners. Mary Reed straightway fell in love with him. Her love was put to a severe test before many days, for the artist, having quarreled with one of the pirates, challenged him to a duel, which they agreed to fight ashore. Mary had doubts about the courage of the man she loved or possibly she loved him so much that she would not let him risk his life. At any rate, she was not a coward. She went on board and insisted on fighting him before the hour set for the duel with the artist.

Mary and the pirate fought with pistol and sword, and after a short engagement she left him dead on the field. It was after the duel that Mary confessed her love to the artist. They pledged their faith, which they deemed as binding as if the ceremony had been performed by a clergyman.

From the notes of those who attended the trial of this woman there is furnished this description of her: She is handsome, robust and showy or distinguished in appearance. That she is capable of great exertion and of sustaining great fatigue no one need doubt after surveying her big frame. She is rather vain in some respects and particularly of her success in deceiving the world as to her sex. She is susceptible of the tenderest emotions and is full of gentleness and affection. Although she was inadvertently drawn into piracy, this horrible mode of life has not stained her character, and she possesses a rectitude of principle and of conduct far superior to many who have not been exposed to such temptations."

Death Saved Companion.

Although the woman appeared robust to all who saw her in court she was far from robust. Her condition such that her execution was postponed several times. She grew worse rapidly and then she died.

It is unlikely that she would have been hanged even if she had not been stricken with illness, but at any rate her death saved her companion, for whom there was not so much sympathy expressed as for Mary Reed.

The Bonney woman was Irish, having been born in Cork. Her father was a lawyer of prominence who deserted his wife and eloped to America with one of his servants, taking Anne with him. He settled in South Carolina and became one of the rice planters of that part of America. When his servant-wife died Anne superintended the household. The girl was looked upon as one of the great beauties of the Carolina coast and her father planned a brilliant match for her, but she was of her own blood and ran away with a sailor. The young people fled to New Providence, where the sailor expected to find employment. They tried of each other quickly, and one day she left him and joined Capt. Rackam. She went to sea in men's clothes at first, and then compromised on a combination costume that was both masculine and suitable for her business. It was by no means cumbersome, and she took to piracy with a relish, appearing as a respectable seaman and having no moral qualms about robbing or killing.

She was known to many of the planters of Jamaica, who had been guests at her father's plantation in the Carolina, and these men interceded at her trial, but she had become so gross and so hardened through her life with the pirates that this intercession amounted to little. She was permitted to walk out of time, however, and when Mary Reed died all pretense of carrying out the sentence in Anne Bonney's case was dropped. She never was pardoned and she never was officially set free, but one day the prison doors were opened and she was permitted to walk out.

And when she disappeared the last woman pirate of which there is record passed from the scene. (Copyright, 1909, by Richard Spillane.)

the Chinese statesmen and patriots can come to fruition. The work of repression is going on rapidly, but opium will still be sold, because it creates an enormous amount of "hard" selling, and smuggling is done. These people are not going to change their ways. The same conditions prevail as would obtain in the United States were we to have a similar law. It would be as short a time as the Chinese have allotted to the wiping out of this terrible evil. Some are honest, some are hypocrites, others are openly disobeying the law, while others, bound in the chains of habit, are unable to refrain from smoking the drug or injecting morphine into their persons behind closed doors. The movement for the abolition of opium is in progress, and it has already accomplished a vast deal of good.

RUNNING THE USURER OUT OF BUSINESS

HE SEASON.

YOUNG MEN TAKE HOLD OF THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—This is surely the day for young men—particularly if they happen to be worth large fortunes. Chandler Hale, who has just been appointed Third Assistant Secretary of State, beginning his duties next week, is in his early thirties. The new First Assistant Secretary of the same department, Huntington Wilson, is only 34 years of age.

Mere youngsters these, to be put in charge of the entire business of our Foreign Office. But this department, hitherto a citadel of conservatism, seems likely to be turned upside down before long. Mr. Wilson is bent on reorganizing it from top to bottom. Not only are there a good many antiquated coveys to be swept away, but certain entire departments are deemed advisable—such, for example, as the establishment of a so-called Latin-American division, which will handle all matters connected with the republics of South and Central America, including diplomatic correspondence and trade questions.

The Third Assistant Secretary of State is a sort of general utility man. He manages everything that nobody else in authority has time to attend to. For instance, whenever an international conference on any subject, such as typhoid or prisons, is held in this country, he either presides or is present as the representative of our Government. At the recent Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York Mr. Hale's predecessor had charge of the diplomats and made it his business to see that they were properly taken care of.

Experienced In Diplomacy.

Young Mr. Chandler Hale has had some little experience in the diplomatic life. Not long ago he was attached to the United States embassy in Vienna, as secretary. He has had a pretty thorough training in the business, indeed, and knows a good deal about international law. A son of Eugene Hale, one of the three men who are said to run the United States Senate, he has enjoyed every advantage that money and social position could afford.

Mr. Hale's mother was a daughter of old Zach Chandler, whose wealth ran well into the millions. This, in fact, is the source of his family's money. His lucky young man is rich not merely in his own right. He married, about five years ago, a daughter of the late senator "Don" Cameron, of Pennsylvania, who had a lot of money of her own.

Young Mrs. Hale, by the way, is one of the most beautiful women in Washington—a tall and stately blonde, very popular in society. About a year ago

SECOND ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE

HALE,
THIRD ASSISTANT SECRETARY.

RESIDENCE OF CHANDLER HALE

young Mr. Hale bought the handsome residence of the late Senator Proctor, of Vermont, at the northeast corner of L and Sixteenth streets. At an expense of $40,000 he has converted it into what many people consider a very ugly house on the outside, though most luxuriously fitted up and furnished within. Its exterior is of white stucco.

Young Mr. Hale is of slight build, with light hair and mustache. Mr. Wilson, his ranking officer, is of a sturdier physique, dark of complexion. The latter is just now recovering from an operation for appendicitis, but such is his energy that he has been getting down to the State Department most days even during his convalescence. He is a very hard worker—a good type of the young rich man of today who would rather put in hard work than loaf.

Besides Huntington Wilson is ambitious. His prospects are bright. When one is First Assistant Secretary of State at 34 years of age one may hope to go far. Graduated from Yale in the class of 1897, he was appointed secretary of legation at Tokyo in the same year. Since then his rise has been steady. Very lucky Senator Cullom has long felt a cordial interest in his prospects—which in all probability has helped a good deal.

Young Wilson remained in Japan, attached to the legation at Tokyo, for nine years, being chargé d'affaires during part of the time. Being not addicted to neglecting opportunities, he picked up a pretty fair knowledge of the Japanese language. Thus it was that, not long ago, when called upon to make a speech at a dinner given to Admiral Uru in New York, he caused a good deal of surprise by talking in Japanese.

Three years ago he was appointed Third Assistant Secretary of State. And later on it was decided to give him a diplomatic job of some importance.

He was named, and the Senate confirmed him, as Minister to Roumania and Serbia. But before he could get away, Mr. Roosevelt changed his mind and appointed him Minister to Argentina. While he was packing up to go to Buenos Ayres Mr. Knox, who meanwhile had become Secretary of State, asked him if he would prefer to be First Assistant Secretary. He decided that it was preferable, and so remained in that capacity.

As First Assistant Secretary, young Mr. Wilson finds himself in a position of control. He has charge of all the business of the Department of State, and can manage things to suit himself. The department today, in respect to its organization, is pretty much what it was a century ago. The same rules of procedure prevail; the red tape is measured off in exactly the same lengths, and the heavy thinking is done by Mr. Wilson. To some extent, at all events, Mr. Wilson intends to alter matters.

Then there is the matter of our trade relations with other countries. They are not altogether what they ought to be. To push our business interests abroad, the Senate, only a few weeks ago, added $100,000 to the regular appropriation for the Department of State. Mr. Wilson has the handling of this money, and he means to do something with it.

Of course, Mr. Knox is boss of the treasury out, nominally. But he does not seem disposed to interfere with the management of its affairs in any active way. He merely looms in the background, as one might say. If the young men can improve the machinery of the establishment, he is entirely willing. Meanwhile, the heavy thinking is done by Alvey A. Adee, the Second Assistant Secretary, who manages all of our diplomatic relations with other countries.

One should not forget to mention the fact that Huntington Wilson is the husband of a very charming woman from Missouri, who was Miss Lucy James. She brought him a fortune, which is a very useful thing in public life. It helps a lot. Not only is wealth useful for social purposes, but it generally happens that good jobs offer themselves to those who do not really need them.

As for Adee, he is one of the cogwheels of the Government machine. Many people feel that if he were to die the State Department would have to go out of business. For twenty-three years he has occupied his present position, conducting all of the diplomatic correspondence, untangling the knots of international subtleties, and keeping the department from running off the track. No important action is ever taken by the Foreign Office without consulting him.

Adee is one of the greatest living authorities on all matters relating to diplomacy. He has all the proceeds of his finger tips, and so can always tell exactly what ought to be done in any given emergency—the whole scheme of diplomacy being built up of precedents. During the very serious Boxer trouble in China, when Day had resigned and Hay was detained in London, he served as Secretary of State ad interim, literally living in his office, where he had his hand on the throttle all the time.

Alvey A. Adee is a man very much liked in Washington. He is wonderfully clever in a great many ways. Photography is one of his particular fads. Also, though the mildest of men, he is a collector of guns. He speaks and writes fluently in French, German, Italian and Spanish. A minor feature of his work is the writing of the speeches of welcome which the President makes to foreign envoys when they come to the White House to be introduced by the Secretary of State. These speeches are either read or memorized by the President. One reason why they have to be so carefully prepared is that any little slip might give offense or cause misunderstanding.

Fixture In Department.

Mr. Adee's position is that of what in any foreign country would be called Permanent Under Secretary. Other officials in the department come and go, but he stays on. He is one of the few men in the Government service who are considered indispensable. Notwithstanding the gravity of his official duties, he is very fond of a joke. Not long ago the chief of the Division of Manuscripts in the Library of Congress, Mr. Adee, said to him: "There is a provision of law which entitles us to withdraw from the department all ancient, historical and no longer useful material."

"If that is so," replied Adee, "you will have to take me along, too."

Most notable among the traits of Mr. Adee is his sense of humor. He knows just how to deal with the foreign diplomats, jolting them properly when they happen to be irritated, and it is a matter of history that he saved this country from a war with Spain at the time of the Virginian affair, when a shot from the Spanish minister in Cuba, and our minister at Madrid was anxious to demand his transportation. "BACKWOODS" PEERS MAY DECIDE FATE OF BRITISH BUDGET

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)

LONDON, Nov. 4.—"Socialism" and "Revolution" are words that are becoming familiar in English politics since the introduction of the present budget, and they are almost entirely directed against the "increment" and "land tax" features of that measure. It is true they have been accepted by some of the advocates of these clauses, but these are the more extreme politicians who are not afraid to call themselves socialists, or, at least to admit that there is much that needs to be reformed in the present system of land tenure in this country.

The unprejudiced observer it is evident that the mantle of Henry George, the American land reformer, has fallen on his namesake; Lloyd George, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer. No one who examines the present measure dispassionately can deny that the mode of the principles contained in it are those of Henry George, watered down a little, perhaps, but the same principles nevertheless, and no one can deny either that they mark an entire departure in British politics. In fact, this very newness forms the strongest part of the position of the opponents of the measure, and has induced many moderate men on the Liberal side to throw in their lot with the Tories who are fighting the proposals tooth and nail. Many of these moderate men are not opposed to the principles, but they believe that Lloyd George has taken the wrong way of bringing them before the country.

New Principles Involved.

The theory of a budget bill is that it should be confined to the production of revenue. Now the revenue which Lloyd George expects to gain from his new proposals is altogether inadequate when considered in the light of their importance and his opponents declare that he is trying, under the cover of a revenue measure, to smuggle through entirely novel legislation which will change the whole face of English life. Mr. George admits this to a certain degree when he says that he does not expect these clauses to produce much in the first year, but declares that they are capable of great expansion. This expansion is just what his enemies are afraid of.

At the present writing he would be a daring prophet who would attempt to predict the fate of the budget. A couple of weeks ago it looked almost certain that the House of Lords would throw it out, after it had been passed by the overwhelming Liberal majority in the Commons. Today the situation seems more doubtful. In any case, it probably will be all a question of tactics. If the Tory party believes it can win in the face of a red-hot agitation for the limitation of the power of the Lords, such as is sure to follow the defeat of the budget, the Lords will throw out the bill. If it believes that it would not be wise to risk its future on this issue, the budget will be passed under protest by the Lords, and an effort will be made to bring about an early dissolution of Parliament so that the whole question may be submitted to the country with the least possible delay.

What Will "Wild Men" Do?

These two alternatives would seem to be the only ones in a country where politics is taken seriously, but there is a third and not at all an unlikely one. That rests with the action of the vast number of peers who have come to be known in political parlance recently as "the backwoodsmen" and the "wild men of the woods." It may not be generally known in America that only about a fifth of the members of the House of Lords ever attend to their duties in Parliament in ordinary times. There are several hundred peers who are never seen at Westminster except in times of great excitement or when their interests are seriously threatened. Then they can be depended on to come down "from the backwoods" in force and swamp any proposal which they consider dangerous, unless they are curbed by the sober, common sense of their fellows who are in touch with the real life of the day. The danger now is that, even if the responsible leaders of the Tory party decide that it would be wisest to let the budget pass, these "wild men" may refuse to accept their leadership and vote solidly, even over the heads of the leaders of their own party, against the budget. They may even force their leaders to embrace the "increment" and "land tax" version of the budget, rather than exhibit to the country the spectacle of the great body of peers divided against itself.

Now, what are these proposals which caused sober and serious English politicians to such a frenzy of excitement, and have caused them to use language about their political opponents the like of which probably has not been heard since Cromwell abolished the King and the Lords, and set up the Commonwealth? On the face of them they appear ridiculously trifling to raise such a commotion; but, as I have said already, it is not the proposals themselves but the principles which they establish, that give rise to such a frenzy of fear and anger. This bitter opposition is confined practically to three features of the budget bill. These are the "increment" and "land tax" version of the budget, and the "duty on undeveloped land and mineral rights." Talking in serious terms, these clauses are as follows:

The increment value duty provides that under certain specified conditions the State shall take from the holder 20 per cent. of the unearned increment value of all real estate. The "unearned increment" is defined as that part of the value which is created by the action of the community and not by the unaided efforts of the owner. The tax would fall almost entirely on urban land and on land adjacent to cities, where value has been created by the growth of population, and it is admittedly very difficult to decide what part of the value has been created by the efforts of the holder and what by the action of the community. A typical case would be that of a new suburb which has been "developed" by a builder who has not been a large developer. If there had not been a large adjacent population waiting to move into it as soon as the buildings were ready, but at the same time it would have not gained its value as building land if it were not for the efforts of the State in developing it. One of the features of this proposal most objected to is that the determination of these factors is to be left to taxing commissioners, from whom there will be no appeal.

Like the rest of the budget, this feature will not be retroactive. The value of the land at the passing of the bill will be estimated and when it is sold the State will step in and take its share of the increased price obtained at the first sale. At each successive sale the State will take 20 per cent. of the increase over the price obtained at the last sale, and in the case of land held by corporations the value is to be estimated periodically for tax purposes. Every twenty years is the period suggested.

The reversion duty clause would do for leaseholds what the increment duty would do for freehold land. Much of the land in England is held on long leases from ground landlords, who have never done anything to improve the land. The favorite term for these leases is ninety-nine years, and when they fall due the ground landlord is entitled to a large sum of money for the land and all improvements, including buildings, which have been made by the leaseholders. In a city like London, for instance, some of the holdings of the ground landlords have increased in value to a hundred or even a thousand times on account of the growth in population and the increased commercial value of the sites. This, it is expected, would soon produce an immense revenue to the Government, and would correspondingly decrease the profits of the ground landlords who are looking forward anxiously to the time when their leases fall due and they will be able to pocket the immense profits which have been piling up since their ancestors leased the land.

A favorite method of getting back some of the increased value which they have been unable to collect during the life of the lease is the imposition of what is known as a "fine" for the renewal of the lease. A case which illustrates this method occurred a few weeks ago. A retail dry goods company had a large shop in the West End of London for which it paid one of the dukes $1,500 a year. That was a fair rent when the lease was made nearly 100 years ago, but at present the rental value of the land is worth just ten times that sum annually. Not content with renewing the lease at $15,000 a year, the duke's agent made the dry goods men pay a fine of $250,000 for the renewal, knowing well that they would rather do this than lose the building which they had erected with reference to their own requirements, and the good luck which they had established in the neighborhood. Had Lloyd George's reversion duty been in existence the State would have forced the duke to disgorge $50,000 of this, which would have gone toward lightening the general taxation.

Land on Undeveloped Land.

But perhaps the feature more feared and hated, and at the same time the feature which seems most insignificant, is the tax on undeveloped land. It is only proposed to place a tax of 1 cent in each $5 of the capital value on such land at first, but, of course, it will be increased later, and that is what the landowners are afraid of. It is also proposed to tax agricultural land, but never do anything to improve the land. The favorite term for these leases is ninety-nine years, and when they fall due the ground landlord is entitled to a large sum of money for the land and all improvements, including buildings, which have been made by the leaseholders. In a city like London, for instance, some of the holdings of the ground landlords have increased in value to a hundred or even a thousand times on account of the growth in population and the increased commercial value of the sites. This, it is expected, would soon produce an immense revenue to the Government, and would correspondingly decrease the profits of the ground landlords who are looking forward anxiously to the time when their leases fall due and they will be able to pocket the immense profits which have been piling up since their ancestors leased the land.

These are the features of the budget, which many Englishmen say amount to a revolution. They speak innocently enough, no doubt, but they do embody new principles and Englishmen are a race of new things, whether they be principles or American labor-saving inventions. The fate of the budget and with it the fate of England for another generation or two probably rests in the hands of the "wild men" who never give politics a thought except when their own pockets are touched. The more Lloyd George and his Liberal friends denounce them the more frightened the "wild men" will become and the more they will insist on their rights. The Tory leaders, be able to keep them in hand, and if so what way will they drive them? JOHN STEEL.

Wonderful Machines Will Tabulate the Census.

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Card-punching and tabulating methods which will greatly reduce the margin of statistical error in the compilation of the thirtieth census population data have been adopted by Director E. Dana Durand.

The card-punching machines to be used at the present census differ radically from those employed before, and, it is believed, not only increase the rapidity of the work, but tend to reduce the number of errors on the part of the clerks doing the punching. With the new punching machine, if an error is made in a single item, even though it might be the last item to be punched on the card, the entire card had to be destroyed. This consumed time and also resulted in a temptation to the operator to let the error go uncorrected.

With the machines now to be used no hole is punched in the card until the keys for all the facts to be punched have been set, and if the operator makes a mistake by depressing the wrong key he can correct it before the card is punched. It was not found possible at the last census to check all of the cards back to the schedules, and it will probably not be feasible to do so at this census. Part of the cards punched by each operator are selected at random and compared, and if any appreciable percentage of error is discovered in those thus compared the other cards punched by the same operator are likewise compared.

The tabulating machines to be used at the present census will also result, it is believed, in a material increase in rapidity and a reduction in errors. This is principally brought about by the fact that the results of the count for each unit of area are automatically printed, whereas formerly they were registered on dials from which readings had to be taken and recorded by hand. The reading of these dials took a large amount of time, during which the machine was idle, and inaccurate readings were not uncommon.

Card for Each Person.

The new method of punching and tabulating employs small machine cards about 6 1/2 inches in size, to represent each individual composing the population April 15, 1910. For this purpose alone 90,000,000 cards have been purchased.

In collecting the data, a schedule is carried by the enumerators and questions in it concerning each individual, call for the name, relationship to head of family, color, sex, age, conjugal condition, place of birth, place of birth of parents, number of years in the United States, citizenship, occupation, whether or not employer or employee, and, if employee, whether or not employed at the date of enumeration, and the number of months unemployed during the preceding calendar year, whether or not engaged in agriculture, school attendance, literacy and tenure of home, and whether or not a survivor of the Union or Confederate army or navy.

The surface of the population card is divided by printed lines into what are called "fields" or divisions, containing certain figures, abbreviations of words, and combinations of letters, which are used as symbols to correspond with, or represent, the details of items of data as reported on the original schedule by the enumerator.

Taking the card as the representative of an individual, it then becomes necessary to transfer to the card all the data on the schedule referring to that individual. This is done by punching out the corresponding symbols leaving open holes at those points.

Built Like a Typewriter.

The automatic electrical punching machine, which will be used, is built on the plan of a typewriter, with a keyboard very similar in appearance, but having 240 different keys. The machine, in its operation, differs from a typewriter in a most important respect. As is well known, in operating the typewriter, every time a key is depressed, a letter is printed, and if a mistake is made the letter must be crossed out or erased, with considerable loss of time and disfiguring of copy. The new card-punching machine obviates this, as the operator, instead of punching one hole at a time, can depress into position for subsequent punching as many keys as are necessary to record the required facts. Each key is independent of all the others and can be released at will.

Before pressing a button, which turns on the electric current for operating the punching mechanism, the operator can look over the depressed keys, comparing them with the schedule, and if a key has been erroneously placed it can be released and error rectified. This work of correction is assisted by having different colors for the keys for each field or division of the card, enabling quicker discovery of the key in error. In the old-style punching machine a hole was punched in a card every time the plunger was depressed. If an error in punching a symbol was made, the card had to be punched out and thrown away. As the plunger's efficiency was based largely upon the fact that the plunger struck the card, it will be seen that the old method laid the operator open to the temptation to let the error stand.

Speed of Tabulation.

With the old machine a skillful clerk could average about 300 cards a day. The new machine will enable an average clerk to punch in a day the work of one operator.

Another time and money-saving feature of the new machine is that the feeding of cards to the punching keys is entirely automatic. As the blank cards are fed in from the rear of the machine, the punched cards are dropped into a magazine in front.

While the operator is punching a card the machine also, by means of a "gang-lever," is automatically applying a mark, or designation, to the card which shows that it is one of the total number representing all of the population which is a "pin box," containing whether city, county or State. Automatic counters are attached to the keys and in this way preliminary announcements of certain important population totals may be made as soon as all of the cards have been punched. Under the old system, when all the punching was done by hand, these figures were not available until the tabulating work was started.

The Census Bureau has ordered 300 of these new punching machines, and it is calculated that the facts on the population schedules can be transferred to cards by a double shift of employees at the rate of about 25,000,000 cards a month.

After the cards have been punched and verified they are ready for the new electrical tabulating machine, similar in many respects to the one used in the twelfth census, which was invented by Mr. Herman Hollerith. It is in the form of a heavy cabinet, from the front of which extends a movable arm or lever attached to the outer extremity of which is a "pin box," containing a pin for each possible hole in a card.

Wonderful Tabulator.

The operator feeds the cards by hand, one at a time, into a receptacle directly under the "pin box." This receiver has holes that come under those in the card. Behind each hole is a small cup. After placing a card in the receiver, the operator touches a spring starting an electric motor. This automatically brings the "pin box" down upon the card. The electrically charged pins pass through the holes into the machinery cups, contact is accomplished, and the current by means of relays causes one or more dials or counters to register. In other words, each pin and its machinery cup form terminals of a separate current passing through an electro-magnet controlling the tabulating dial for each item of data.

The pins which reach the unpunched surface of the card are pushed back into the box so that no contact is possible. The tabulating process is completed by an automatic recording and printing system, somewhat on the stock "clicker" plan, connected with each dial. When the operator wishes to make a reading or to ascertain a total or series of totals, an electric button is touched and the details are automatically printed on ribbons of paper, after which the counters return to zero.

Each tabulating machine can, if necessary, carry sixty counters, but it is believed that the tabulations necessary will only require about twenty, as that represents approximately the average number of facts punched into each card.

Much Quicker Work.

A speed of 25,000 cards tabulated per day on one of these machines should be reached easily. Contracts have been let for the building of 100 of them. The daily output of the old style machine averaged about 16,000 cards, owing to the fact that the counters had to be read by the operator and the results recorded by hand, a method productive of error and loss of time.

The form of tabulator described is really semi-automatic, but requires the constant attention of an operative when in service. However, the census experts are now at work on a tabulator designed to be wholly automatic in its action, which will feed cards from a magazine and receive them into another magazine after the fashion of the new card punch. Electric motors of a half horsepower are employed for the operation of the new census machines.

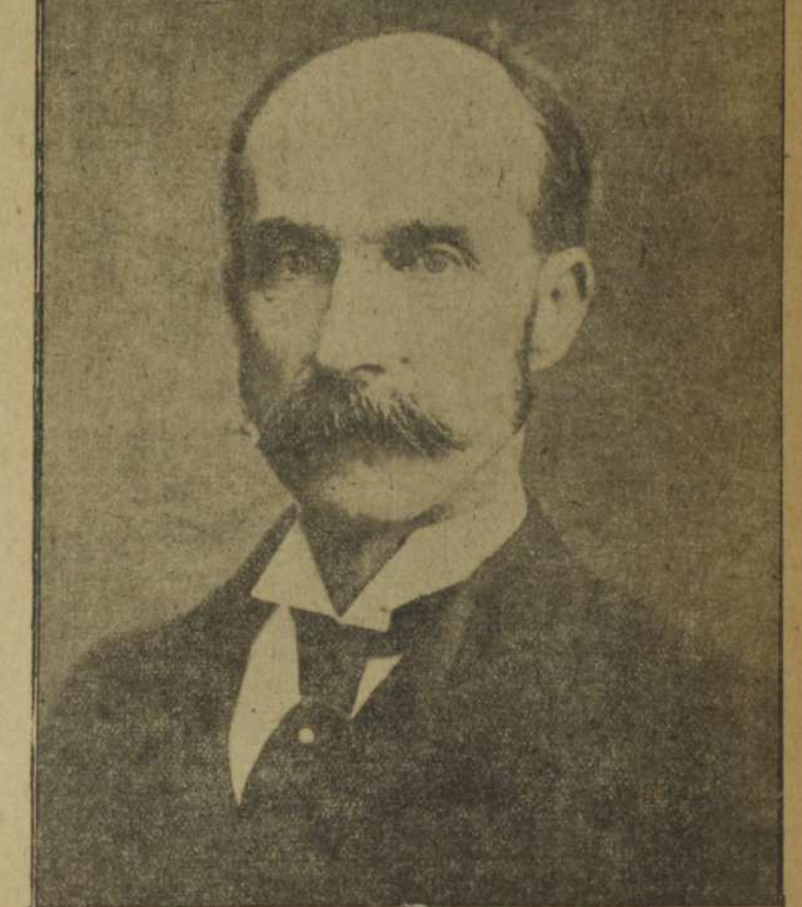

After the transfer of information to the cards has been completed, the schedules are filed away in a fireproof vault for permanent preservation. The clerks handling the cards cannot tell from anything on them the names or addresses of the individuals for whom the cards stand, so that in the tabulation and subsequent statistical processes the personal element is lost and the fact that the counters had to be read by the operator and the results recorded by hand, a method productive of error and loss of time.

One other machine is employed in the work. It is an automatic electrical sorter which separates into different compartments the groups of cards arranged in reference to the character of the statistical facts for which they supply the facts.

The census of 1890 was noteworthy because of the introduction of electric tabulation, but not of punching. The card-punching machines were simple mechanical devices, operated by hand. The symbols on a card were punched out by a plunger. The electrical tabulating machine used in 1890 and 1900 also was operated by hand.

OH, MAN! MAN!

(By Will L. Davis.)

We had joined a tourist party on the usual tourist plan. We had come from Kentucky, Texas and fair Michigan. Some history, cities fine. All the way from grimy London to the sea, we were fine. So we came to that old fastness, where Monk Luther was confined—When he really saw old Nicky—Still, some say, 'twas in his mind—There, where the devil's in the bottle—Full of ink at Satan's head.

Which the latter dodged discreetly, So it splashed the wall instead. Now there was a maid among us, Who had come from Frankfort, Mich. She spoke prettily of peachies. "And you believe," I asked her, "To old Bingley, the Rhye?" At the wall she looked a minute, Then at me with face demure. "Yes, and I have sometimes seen him," "You?" said I, in great surprise. "Yes," she answered, "I have seen him—'I have seen him—in men's eyes.'"

PLAYS AND PLAYERS OF THE WEEK

Audience Almost Outshines the Play—The House So Large That It Is Difficult To Hear and See—Gossip of New York Stage.

It is flippant of me to dwell on trivial details in the face of a rich and scholarly Shakespearean production; of an exceptional performance of "The Belle of Brittany" at the Old South; of the dignified inauguration of a great enterprise. Well, if it is a flippant thing to say, I say it. The New Theater itself. The two "opening" nights revealed one serious failure—"The Belle of Brittany". The evening taking. The auditorium, simply, is so vast that only a small percentage of the theatergoers could see the production of the drama adequately. As for the former, there is no fault of interfering poets, nor could better lines have been devised for a clear view of the stage from the furthest point in the house. The theater is a fine one, but it is not a good one for the purpose. The production of the play is a poltroon. But if a spectacular Shakespearean tragedy was "lost" in it what was the fault of the theater? The drama? It would be hardly more extravagant to say that because "Candida" is a play that Harvard should produce it in the Stadium.

He has spoken of the faults exposed in the first night of "Antony and Cleopatra" and of the criticisms which he met with in production. The scenery was massive, imaginative and beautiful, yet always overdone. The costumes were magnificent. The costuming was beautiful in coloring and generally effective in design. The acting was above all else, admirable in its simplicity and always admirable for clear-cut simplicity. The cast—containing many notable names—was excellent. The play was probably as good as could be gathered for Shakespearean tragedy, and the performance, especially in the last act, might be considered. Presumably they are to be seen in the new play, "The Merchant of Venice," which is being produced at the same time. Somewhere in the text Antony says he feels "full of lead," and he is right. The play is a good one, but it might be. The role is not a good one, but an actor of heroic method might make it so. So, the play is a good one, but it is utterly swamped beneath it as he was by the theater, though in the scene with Cleopatra it offers a valuable substitute for fate and authority.

Miss Marlowe Better.

Miss Marlowe did far better in a part far better than the stage reveals; her grace and variety, her sense and serious voice, all exercised their customary powers. Her singing was superb, and her Cleopatra, her passions was a Juliet, her love a Romeo, her grief a storm, her tempests perilously like the petty fury of a child. Miss Marlowe's performance has never failed to invest a role with English delivery.

Now about the new Parisian promise of delivery in burlesque. It comes of Ziegfeld's dancing, the stage reviews justify Paris, first for his Anna Held show, and then for his new dancing, which is mainly of girls frisky at one or another of the dances of the night, and of the tourists in the French capital. It was not so long ago that the Parisians gave us week performances entitled "Gay Paris on the Boulevard," and "The Girls of the 'Queens of the Jardin de Paris,' 'Glorious the night of (that show I almost, — not quite!—let Daniels fool me with an old trick played with new audacity). He ended a dialogue pertinent to the play's place in the canon with jests and anecdotes, and with the assurance of a raconteur, saying: that is to say, impromptu talking, — interpolation of unrecalled lines and omission of cues. She hid some giggles and a gasp, and I hid a gasp and a giggle, for her merriment, and finally fled from the room. But there came into my memory, from thirty years ago, the common practice of actors and actresses to make a list of the good and men of the now-forgotten San Francisco, and to read it out at the end of a somewhat half-dramatic would-be behavior. I thought of the list, and I thought of me among themselves, and the glibly audacious, and I thought of the list, and I thought of the delight of the rounders, who fancied they were on the inside of the comedy.

"The Belle of Brittany."

"The Belle of Brittany" is one more of those musical fads that are made in London by a collaborating half-dozen humorists, rhymesters, melodists and stage crafters in a nicer, neater, politer manner than that of the corresponding American product. It hasn't a petticoat that doesn't reach down, when unhooped, to the wearer's ankles. Its half-hundred girls are all of a piece.

girls in many costumes look like Indian girls. The first number is a dance outbreak in an Apache wigwag—not an Indian dance, but the now well-known gay dance. The girl who dances it exploits a girl who has modest peasant dress. The girl in black decollete gown that threatens to fall off her shoulders contrasts the contrasting view of her body. If that is not enough, the first Apache dance the girls perform is a wigwag. The spectators would have to be very close if they applauded it more than any other dance.

That would be a pity, but for the quieter general enjoyment of the many acted scenes. The first scene is a scene of great sort of thing. As a play, "The Belle of the South" is of no consequence at all, but it is a play that is well worth watching into a tuneful and illustrative ballad. The girls are barking dogs with hands and feet. The first scene is a scene of racing horses with foot prancing and foot prancing. The first scene is a scene of wings and with fluttering arms for wings. The first scene is a scene of to help out, these pleasantries are very good. The first scene is a scene of the young Augustin Daly's, and such a scene to his ventures in musical farce and comedy. The first scene is a scene of progress on stagecraft.

Frank Daniels has been permitted to do as he pleases with the role of a bankrupt who has lost his fortune and is forced to undertake to marry his son to the heiress belle of Brittany. He is merciful and altogether the American jester that he is, but he is not a very good one. His line from negro minstrelsy to be the villain who, in "The Rag Baby," reviled his father, is a little better. He has been clasped by John L. Sullivan, the prizefighter, and he makes his songs count for levity by giving a farce of his inability to sing. The only thing that is a touch of the meaningless long words is a feature, but his mite appeals to a friend in the wing to protect him against an enemy aloft. He is a little better than the one who, with the English play, or those English players in the company; but that doesn't matter. His own oddity wins out.

Is the age to be uplifted from the very bottom or dropped lower? Is what we have been told to do, to treat women as female minstrelsy, to fling toward with a Parisian kick and stamp of approval, a new class of show girls, classified as burlesque, and running along in rhymes and puns, developed into musical dress, and a sort of show of travel, displaced by vaudeville interpositions and dances? Meanwhile, the old type of female minstrelsy eliminated its own life. In which the only men were the jokers and comedians, who were the only woman was the Interlocutor at the middle, and the rest of the row was young women, who were the only ones to cover the seats, without hiding the legs. The discarded, minor persons, in place of the discarded, minor persons, in place of give a musical force in rough and usually in the first class. There you have the evolution of the present burlesque show, by eighty-one touring companies.

Now about the new Parisian promise of novelty in burlesque. It comes of Ziegfeld's disfigurement of the stage reviews in Paris, first for his Anna Held show, and later extending to others and consisting mainly of girls frisky at one or another of the wicked resorts supported by tourists in the French capital. It was possible for me to see within a single week performances entitled "Gay Parisites," "Girls of the Moulin Rouge," "Queens of the Jardin de Paris," "Girls of the branded French as I would not have been able to do anything else. In the first of these eight shows, a scene in a notorious Paris restaurant had been designed to elicit—although not by artistic design—for some singing and dancing, a riotous and noisy response. The audience were rolling with American visitors, but they were not tourists, but the usual New York Jewish and Italian crowd, and Jewish jay of our burlesque. There was a variant dupe, though, for after his first scene, Gerardo had been told to say that he tickle the multitude, but sicken them with his music, and to do up his trapeze. The audience was struck dumb by that and he had been seen to do up his trapeze, while watched it in ominous silence, but when the strengthened weeping from the balcony and the shouting from the box, parquet and gallery united in loud acclaim.

And improvement in burlesque was brought by a transfer—from purchase to production—of the same material for their purpose in musical farces. This second-hand material is much better than the first-hand, and the same can be said of those; that's, of course, but there is a surprise in the cleverness of the presentation of the story.

The story involves an exposition of

There are much, much, more than the humor comedians who accompany them, and the latter are not to be taken in to be comparable with the sirens who are petted in Broadway.

It is a pity that the "Widows" do not start out with a staccato of young women who are as much as the "Widows" as the limbs they encase. Those lengths of jet arms and legs presumably are not intended to be taken as a limb; while the figures as a whole are reminiscent of the times when female impersonators were not so much as they were inert enough to flatter frost rather than heat. They go through the motions of the "Widows" with an intimate stolidity of Amazoons in the marches of the "Ghosts," "Ghosts" and "Ghosts," and I draw, as further aid, "Fun in a Department Store," though I have not seen it.

There is a certain passion for home and the wishful love for a child who has passed out of reach, which is the basis of the play, as Herr von Barwig, a cultivated German of the most refined type, who, in Leipzig, was a student of the famous opera, a composer of distinction, and a man of letters.

The production is the same that was seen in New York, and the company all the same, and the play is the same, as I have mentioned for her delightful comedy with Mr. Warfield in "The Auctioneer," still the same, as I have mentioned for her landlady, Mrs. Houston, the same.

In "Sham," in which she won success in New York, after having had a run of hard luck in a play by Maurice Campbell which would have dimmed the was awakened by something familiar. It was the "outer," one of the expensive and prosperous musical faces of the season before.

"My eyes and ears deceive me? Is it delusion?" Here are three of the impulsive artists doing real acting as the shoppers who have trouble with an amiable character. The first is found in the act; you see it when Lew Fields was that handsome and Connie Ediss, was that from London, was the woman who, being used with whiskey in the carbonic fizz, had no hysterical reaction. Was it so concerning? Well, here are the pairs of social shoppers who match by colored blouses the stripes they want, and all with the air of the original couple of Henderson favorites; and I braced myself for a strong scene. But the models of the incident stay in the action. But the fun doesn't go to pieces. The bill says that Miss Tracy is the model of the remarkably like Comic. Some one was sent to sell the material to teach her and the other two others.

Katherine Van Riper, a young society woman who inherits all of her father's wealth, has a very unusual love life. Her income, and who proceeds to satisfy her whims, are all at the expense of her money properties, the butcher, the baker and the most respectable tradesman and tradesman with whom she opens every new opening an account. In order to pay her bills, she sells her jewelry, her valuable possession, a pearl necklace given by her great-grandmother by Gen. Lafayette—she even gives away her diamonds. She already sold the gems, substituting plain in their place. But the solution of Katherine's problem is cleverly worked out, and the curtain descends on a happy finale.

Miss Mannering will be supported by Charles Richmond, who played opposite Frances Starr when she won fame in "The Rose of the Rancho," and who is one of the most popular actors here.

Miss Mannering's new play, "I saw," has an unusual appeal to men and women alike. It tells the story of a young woman who enters "a man's world" to combat for what she considers has become a lost cause. The play contains elements in the play, and Miss Mannering gives full opportunity for the display of dramatic art in all its different dominating phases.

The popularity won by Miss Carothers in "The Three Us" has attracted several theatergoers for the great success of Miss Mannering has made of "A Man's World."

The power of mental suggestion in many of its phases and ramifications is the theme of “The Witching Hour.” The basic idea of this powerful play, that of telepathy, is admirably illustrated in the play. Thomas goes further and draws a case which tends to prove that a jury through the use of telepathy can determine during its deliberations, nearly always with accuracy, the result of a general public opinion poll. The play is a study in the human mind, then returning to the verities of life that has been watched with universal interest.

Refused By George Edwardes, "The Merry Peasant" Was Taken Up By A Young Army Officer With More Enthusiasm Than Experience Who Got His Friends To Finance It—National Shakespeare Theater Scheme Received Coldly in London, and Now Malcolm Watson States That the Initial Subscription of $350,000 Was Put Up By Miss Dodge, of America.

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)
LONDON, Oct. 2.—It would be almost unnecessary to refer to the production of "The Merry Peasants" at the Strand-Late Waldorf Theatre, were it not that the attending that event offered an instructive object lesson in the matter of theatrical enterprise. The piece so far has proved a hopeless failure. Even the most indulgent account of empty benches, and I am told the receipts were under fifty dollars. "The Servant in the House" is clearly the work which will attract, but it struck me as being a crude, ill-digested and not always in the best of taste. Unpleasantly surprised, and most disappointed, in the manner the result must be the closing of the theater, and as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has said, "the house will never produce his new piece, 'The House of Temperley,' there before Boxing Day, if it is not sold by the end of the week." The house on his hands and the rent to be except the dancing of a little 15-year-old girl and one or two of Leo Fall's musical numbers. How then did such a work ever contrive to see the light on the stage of a provincial theater? The facts are worth recording.

To begin with, the original play, "Der Geldhahn," has enjoyed a considerable measure of success in Germany. To serve, however, that George Edwards, to whom all prizes of the kind naturally go, had been in touch with the place, a significant proof of the value he placed upon it. But a certain amount of money was required. Ten years ago played rather a plucky part in the London market, he was now more or more ignorant and planked down $1,000 in order to obtain an option. Asked how he came to do this, he explained such matters he made the English adaptation himself and that he had a number of friends. Jack Harrison, the well-known costumer, Harrison happens to be a member of the Eccentric Club, whom he once proceeded to rope into the affair. The result was that the production of the successful "Dollar Princess," mind you, cost him $1,000. The result was $500 from one man, $1,000 from another and so on and so on.

By the time the production had been advertised, the music talked about at the meeting of the promoters of the National Shakespeare Memorial Theater took place in London presiding. Great expectations were entertained that the production was only another instance of the mountain giving birth to a mouse. The organizers, however, were not to be deceived by actor-managers by selecting a Saturday night performance. As it was well known, the usual engagements of the latter would prevent them from attending. And some of the most influential actors of the movement obstinately refused to put in an appearance.

There was to be a wonderful gathering of the kind, however, and the organizers asked to form committees throughout the length and breadth of the land with a view to the production of a production of a National Theater in London. Only one person, however, was to be seen. He pumped cold water upon the proceedings by insisting that the site of the proposed theater was in the Strand, near the Avon instead of in London. Altogether, however, the production was a matter of derision rather than of admiration. And now here is a little point connected with the production of the play, a profound secret. A great deal has been said about the fact that an anonymous donor has put down $500. With cars in the Boer war had brought him a fortune, and he had been able to raise millions, especially with the famous Stilly and his brother, Harry. When they were in the 5-6-7-8-9-10 while a very middle-aged German (actor, who had been in the Stillys' opera, offered to contribute a similar sum to the syndicate. The name of the hero, Harrison himself provided the concept of the play, and the piece, he promised a success he would have given a score to a failure that would have been a failure. This way the syndicate was at last formed, and the play was written, and it who understood even the first principles of the drama. It was a question of this anonymous donor in a question of the syndicate, and the syndicate to say on the very best authority that the syndicate was a syndicate. The syndicate could name Miss Dodge, Fanny was a blow to our national pride to be told that the syndicate was a syndicate. The Memorial Theater are provided by the syndicate, and the syndicate may state, was Lena Ashwell's backer in the syndicate, and the syndicate Kingway Theater, but the two ladies, as ladies sometimes came to a serious matter, and the syndicate, and the syndicate after a twelvemonth Miss Dodge withdrew, and the syndicate, and the syndicate of how real and brittle a thing is the

The past week has also witnessed the production of "The Servant in the House," a comedy by the same author. It is doomed to but a short career. Certainly the first night audience apparently liked it, but the second night they damned it. In some instances with faint praise, in others in terms not to be misinterpreted. The result was that there was a good deal of cordial applause, and promptly seizing his opportunity, the author, who is a very capable actor on the stage, His enthusiasm carried him still further and, borne away by his feelings, he delivered a speech which he described as a decidedly all-time speech. "I have waited three years for this opportunity," he said, "and by God! It was worth waiting for."

"I'm afraid his ardor has evaporated considerably," said the audience, and the second night presented a "beggarly

Although every possible influence has been brought to bear upon him, Cyril Maude has not been able to get "The Frohman" and "Maurice" to return to him for his new play. His departure from the city of "Smith" at the Comedy Theatre was a very noisy affair, but he was easy to fill. She is, however, under contract to Maude only up to the close of the season, and it is not probable that he is of long duration. Maude's new piece is a three-act comedy by Richard Pryce, and it is not probable that it will be a plaything. He collaborated, notwithstanding, with Frederick Fenn, the author of "The Girl in the Red Velvet Thumb" and he was responsible, also, for "Fenn," for one of George Alexander's few productions. He has not, however, produced some little time ago at the St. James'. Lottie Venne also goes to Maude for her new play.

The "Music Master" made Warfield famous. His great popularity kept him in the play for five years in New York. He made his return to his favorite city in the play "The Music Master" in three acts written by Charles Klein and touched off by David Belasco. Although it is described as a comedy, it is really a heart interest play, and Mr. Warfield's performance is one of the best of the point at which handkerchiefs are waved. SOME MAY BE STILL ALIVE.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 12.—Twelve men dead and almost 400 imprisoned in a burning and gas filled mine was the situation that confronted a thousand impotent men and women crowded about the mouth of the St. Paul mine at midnight. Seven hours after the explosion hope of rescuing the prisoners alive had almost died away. Even at that hour the number of men in the mine could not be accurately determined. Officials of the mine declared that about 185 men had escaped while the fire was in an incipient state.

The number of men at work in the mine was a matter of dispute. Those familiar with the mine, but not connected with its management, declared the working force to number 566 men. Mine officials placed it at a much lower figure, but would not be specific.

Few Survive.

That none survived, or at least, were near the entrance, was indicated when a bucket large enough to hold several men was lowered down the escape shaft. It was brought up empty. While the natural refuge of the men would be the furthest galleries, miners declared that the fumes and gases generated by the fire had permeated every crevice of the three veins and that no man would emerge alive.

Every phase of the disaster indicates that it will prove the greatest mine catastrophe in the history of the State, if it does not prove the worst in the mine annals of the country. James Steele, mine superintendent, declared five hours after the explosion that it was almost impossible that any of the miners could escape.

The mine has a day shift of 484 men. Of these fifty left the mine at noon. Twenty-five are known to have escaped after the fire broke out.

Entrance Sealed.

The entrance to the mine has been sealed up in the hope of checking the flames. The building above the pit entrance was blown up to permit this.

Despite the frantic efforts of the officials and the scores of volunteers, it seemed assured at 6 o'clock that only bodies of the dead would be taken out. Until to-morrow morning, when the covering will be removed and rescuers endeavor to penetrate the smoke and gas-choked shaft and veins, no certainty as to the fate of the inmates can be learned.

Smoldering Fire Causes Explosion.

The fire causing the explosion, which may prove one of the greatest tragedies in the list of mine horrors, had an origin almost trivial. A pile of hay allowed to smolder too long finally ignited the timbers of the mine and before the workers realized their danger the mine was filled with smoke, gases and flames, and all exit was impossible.

Heroism, such as is rarely exhibited, was shown by officials of the mine and residents of the town of Cherry. Those men who were outside the mine when the fire originated contributed five to the list of twelve men dead. Alexander Nerberg, a pit man, gave his life unhesitatingly in a futile effort to save those of his comrades who risked their lives with him.

Brought To Surface Dead.

Standing at the bottom of the shaft he carried the bodies of four men into the cage, the only way of escape. As the last was carried in, he fell unconscious across the body. He was dead, as were all his companions when the cage was lifted to the top.

Those who had gone into the pit with him were John Bundy, the mine superintendent; John Flood and Isaac Lewis, screening women, weeping children and frantic but helpless men crowded around the place. A few survivors were surrounded by groups of the women, and their answers to the loudly shriek-

Frantic Women At Mouth.

At the entrance of the shaft a scene was enacted such as is seen only at a disaster of this kind. Hundreds of shrieking women, weeping children and frantic but helpless men crowded around the place. A few survivors were surrounded by groups of the women, and their answers to the loudly shrieked inquiries only added to the terror of the women. Almost to a man they declared that there was no hope for those left behind in the mine.

Almost 200 of the men imprisoned, they declared, were in the third vein, the only entrance to which was from the second vein, almost 500 feet from the main shaft of the pit. Superintendent Steele reluctantly echoed the opinion of the miners.

When the extent of the fire was realized the officials saw that ordinary measures were ineffectual. The fire had burned away the timbers of the shaft and the flames soon reached the escape shaft. A few minutes later the fan which supplied air to the shaft collapsed and tumbled through the opening.

Blaze Comes To Surface.

The flames then swept on to the mouth of the pit, where they were carried to the surface, forcing back all those who ventured near. The officials knew that the fire must be eating its way back into the shaft, and then the heroic measure of sealing the mouth of the pit was adopted. Before this water had been poured down the escape shaft, but with no better effect than to flood the floor and further impede any effort of those inside to escape.

That those of the men who were able had retreated to the farthest ends of the veins, was the statement of the miners on the surface. There they might huddle together, gasping what little oxygen remained in the sealed and burning mine and praying that the rescuers might reach them before it was exhausted. The most hopeful of those seeking to aid the prisoners doubt that more than a few score will be found alive when that comes.

Careless Man Responsible.

The only men to escape were those near the main shaft when the fire started. They declared that a careless miner had thrown a torch on a bundle of hay used to feed the mules stationed in the mine. No attention was given the smoldering hay for a few minutes. Then two miners threw the burning mass on a cart and started toward the main shaft, about 150 feet away. Before it was reached a small explosion occurred and in but a few moments the entrance to the vein from the shaft was sealed.

$100,000 LOSS IF SUSTAINED.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 12.—(Special.)—The case of the Burke-Zenda Company against the General Supply and Construction Company, which built the new Capitol, was decided to-day by Special Judge J. M. Wilson, in the Franklin Circuit Court, and Wilson holds that the Federal Union Surety Company, the surety for the Capitol contractors, is not liable for any part of the debt created in building the Capitol under the second contract that was made between the State and the contractors.

The first contract called for $880,000, the second for $219,000, but the sureties of the contractors claim that they were not given a notice of the second contract, and Judge Wilson decided that it did not receive a notice.

There is about $150,000 due to the subcontractors by the contractors, and there is but $78,000 to pay off the debt, much of which is due under the second contract. The decision, therefore, will let the surety off from liability of $100,000 and the subcontractors will lose that amount if a decision is sustained by the Court of Appeals.

"PETE" CARRIES OFF THE HONORS.Jack Chinn's Hound Wins Bunch of Cups At the Foxhuntingers' Meet.

Lawrenceburg, Ky., Nov. 12.—(Special.)—The annual meet of the National Fox-hunters' Association closed here this afternoon. One of the prettiest and most interesting trials of the week was the All Age stake, which was run south of the city to-day in Bond's woods. After a chase of six hours "Pete," owned by Jack P. Chinn, was awarded the honors. Other award winners were: Hunting and trailing, "Pete" (Calvin-Lady); first, "May" (Ford-Mon); J. S. Smith, second, and "Nell" (Ben-Kate); Samuel L. Woodbridge, third. Endurance, Pete, first; May, second, and Cricket (Calvin-Phoebe); W. J. Leavelle, third.

Pete won every race that he was entered in and captured the following handsome silver cups during the meet: Walker field trials, breeders, hunting and trailing and endurance. Mr. Chinn was jubilant over his sweeping victories. The Foxhuntingers' Cup was awarded to Nell, owned by S. L. Woodbridge, of Versailles. She also won the world's championship at the Bunswick field trials, Barry, Mass., recently.

The hunters were loud in their praise of the reception tendered them by the people here, and the meeting was a success. The trial of the Foxhuntingers' Cup was a unanimous verdict that the association had never in its history received such a cordial and hearty welcome as Lawrenceburg accorded them. A petition signed by 1,500 citizens was presented to the foxhuntingers asking that next year's meeting be held here.

Mr. Head's Invitation.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 12, 1909.—Mr. James P. Whallen, city-dweller, acknowledging your splendid business qualifications and the good judgment you have shown in the past, I am exceedingly anxious that you be a member of my official cabinet, and I hereby tender you the chairmanship of the Board of Public Safety and trust you can see your way clear to accept same. Very truly yours,

W. O. HEAD, Mayor-elect.

No Other Announcements.

Mayor-elect Head has so far made no announcement of whom he would put on the boards, and the letter to Col. Whallen is, in fact, the first announcement of any person being invited to be a member of one of the boards. Mr. Head said last night that he would announce his official boards either to-morrow or next day, but not sooner. He will probably announce a number of appointments as soon as he takes his seat as Mayor.

The stone is to be similar in color and texture to that from which the old statue was made, and which, according to the plan of the statue, will be placed in the hands of the figure. The contract calls for the completion of the new statue by April 1.

SENATOR ALDRICH MAKES

Laws Essential.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 12.—Senator Aldrich, chairman of the Monetary Commission, told the business men of St. Paul to-day that some radical changes in the banking and currency laws are essential, and he expressed confidence that they would be made.

At a dinner in the evening he spoke in detail of the operations of the commission, and at a luncheon took occasion to outline his hopes that relief legislation may be had.

"What we want to do in this country," said Mr. Aldrich, "is this, in a concrete way.

We want to establish in the people throughout the country a feeling of confidence that there can be an extension of note issues and of credits whenever they are absolutely demanded. That is, if an emergency should arise so that there should be a reason for extensions of credit, or for a temporary increase in note issues, there should be a feeling that there is some process by which that want may be met. You want first of all to know what you are going to do, and then the machinery to do it. And the machinery, in the long run, will furnish the confidence. That is the whole problem, gentlemen; and it is a big problem, too."

Huntsville, Ala., Nov. 12.—Maj. William H. Echols, capitalist, and for a long time president of the First National Bank, died suddenly to-day of paralysis.

He was 75 years old and a native of Alabama. He was graduated at the West Point Military Academy, and at the outbreak of the Civil War resigned his commission as Lieutenant of Engineers, United States army, accepting a commission as Major of Engineers in the Confederate army.

He had charge of the fortifications on the South Atlantic seaboard during the Civil War.

Maj. Echols leaves a widow. He was the father of Col. Charles P. Echols, United States army; Prof. W. H. Echols, of the University of Virginia, and Mrs. Robert E. Sprague, of Huntsville.

DANGEROUSLY STABBED
BY COLORED YOUTHPAUL DENZIK, ELEVEN YEARS OLD, CUT DURING QUARREL.POLICE ARE ON LOOK-OUT FOR THE ASSAILANT.

BOY VICTIM MAY NOT LIVE.

During a quarrel over some unknown cause, Paul Denzik, the 11-year-old son of Adolph Denzik, was dangerously stabbed in the left side over the heart by Frank Greathouse, a colored boy, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The injured lad was taken to his home, where he received medical attention, and the negro boy escaped and has not been seen since.

While there were no witnesses to the fight, it was learned from the statements of the injured boy that he and the assailant, who became involved in a quarrel, when the negro brought a cow to graze on the common at Fifteenth street and Ormsby avenue. The Denzik boy was so weak from the loss of blood when he got to his home, 1827 Wilson street, that he was unable to get up, and from what could be learned the trouble started over the applying of epithets regarding the Greathouse boy's cow. It was learned that the negro, who is 12 years old, pulled his knife and stabbed young Denzik in the side. Then he fled the cow and fled.

The Denzik boy started to his home, which is a block away from the scene of the quarrel, but became so weak that he sat down on the curb to rest. An unknown white man came along and led him to his home. There he was attended by Dr. Charles A. Edekin. The physician stated last night that the boy's injury was dangerous, but not necessarily fatal. Immediately after the trouble the police were notified and they went to the Greathouse boy's home on Oldham street near Twelfth street, but he had not come home late last night.

BODY OF CHARLES RICE

In Great Speech.

CROWDS CHEER RESULT.

Paris, Nov. 14.—Mme. Margherita Steinheil was acquitted by a jury at an early hour this morning of the murder of her husband, Adolph Steinheil, a noted painter, and her stepmother, Mme. Japy. The verdict was rendered at 12:55 a. m., after two and a half hours' deliberation, during which the jury thrice summoned and fainting. The prisoner was the president of the court for explanations, thus proving that the original majority was for conviction.

Sentiment Favored Prisoner.

To some degree sentiment and a stuffy, crowded courtroom favored the prisoner and the delay caused much apprehension. With the first appearance of the jury, however, several of whom were smiling, an instinctive feeling of acquittal flashed through the courtroom.

A dramatic scene followed. The red-robed judge and counsel fled in and took their places. Every eye was riveted on the door through which the prisoner should enter, but she did not appear. M. de Vallee, the presiding judge, turned to the jury and said: "Have you reached a verdict?"

Verdict of Acquittal.

"The foreman arose and replied: 'On our conscience we answer 'no' to every question.'"

A salvo of "bravos" followed this announcement and a perfect bedlam broke loose. M. Aubin, counsel for Mme. Steinheil, embraced his colleagues. Men and women in the rear of the hall jumped and screamed for joy. The judge threatened to clear the courtroom and when a semblance of order was restored he called: "Bring in the accused."

Prisoner Has Fainting Spell.

Fully two minutes passed before the black-robed figure with a white face, drooping on her breast, appeared in the doorway, supported on either side by agendarmes. The woman swayed and seemed to be fainting, but in response to a wild outburst of cheers she lifted her head and looked about, smiling faintly in acknowledgment. Then she tottered forward and sank on the floor beside the rail.

Crowd Cheers Wildly.

When the judge pronounced the verdict, her faint murmur of thanks was hardly heard. An instant later M. Aubin was over her, lifting her in his arms. The crowds surged forward in a solid wall, making the rafters ring with cheers. Outside the gloomy court tens of thousands who had been waiting for hours took up the cry. Special editions of the papers spread the news like wildfire through the boulevards, where thousands more were waiting in front of the cafes, and the same scenes of rejoicing were witnessed there.

Mme. Steinheil Released.

The ceremony of liberating Mme. Steinheil occurred soon after her acquittal and the woman, heavily veiled, accompanied by a high-powered automobile and dashed away to an unknown destination, hotly pursued by newspaper reporters.

Last Day of Trial.

The last day of the trial was given over largely to the argument of M. Aubin, counsel for the prisoner. Considerable delay was occasioned by the absence of the foreman of the jury, who was summoned to the court by a messenger and returned with a substitute. Maitre Aubin, speaking with much feeling and sympathy for his client, devoted some time to telling the story of her life as child, wife and mother.

"I do not seek to place her on a pedestal," he said, "but she must not be put in the pillory. I defend her with all my skill because I believe her innocent."

Mme. Steinheil weeps.

Mme. Steinheil wept gently as her counsel spoke of how her husband idolized her. M. Aubin maintaining that he enjoyed the adulation of which she was the object. If her husband knew of her intrigues he never indicated it by word or sign.

The counsel said he greatly regretted that former President Felix Faure's name had been mentioned.

"Now who can say," he asked, "how much harm the perfidious insinuations of which Mme. Steinheil was the object in connection with the former President have done her? I prefer not to invoke the shadow of this profound patriot here."

Original Story True.

After sketching the defendant's intrigues with Bordere, he came to the crime, insisting that the original story, which he asked for in clear analysis, tended that the entire circumstantial case of the prosecution was a tissue laboriously elaborated on presumptions without a single fact to support them.

He argued that the prosecution lacked logic when it asked for his clients' confession, while admitting inability to bring charges against her accomplices whose identity had been plainly indicated.

Finally, he said, Bordere's testimony had exploded the motive which the prosecution had assumed.

Prolongs His Pleadings.

M. Aubin prolonged his pleadings far into the night, largely spoiling the harmony of the proceedings by a series of petty details whereby he sought to break down the theory of the prosecution and to establish every piece of direct evidence consistent with Mme. Steinheil's story.

The courtroom, lighted with glaring chandeliers, was stifling hot. The jury

AUTO RECORDS AT ATLANTA

In Spite of Their Terrible Speed Drivers Escape Injury.

TRACK SAFEST IN WORLD.

Diebrow Captures the Leading Event, a 200-Mile Contest, In Splendid Time.

BIG CROWD ATTENDS RACES.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 13.—Although American automobile track records were broken right and left, the first meeting on the new Atlanta speedway was finished to-day without the loss of a life and without an injury of more than the slightest importance. George Robertson, Lewis Strang, H. L. Kilpatrick, John Aiken and other drivers of note declared that the track is probably the safest in the world.

The safety lies largely in the asphaltum used in holding the cement and dirt together and which forms the surface of the track.

That motor racing has taken a hold on the fancy of Southerners is said to be indicated plainly by the attendance, which steadily grew larger from the first day, and was at all times greater than was to be expected of a city of the size of Atlanta.

The climax of the meet came in the first race to-day, a 200-mile contest for stock cars, which was won by L. A. Diebrow, driving a Rambler "50." The race finished as follows:

First, Rambler (Diebrow).....2:52:43.32
Second, Fiat (Robertson).....2:57:47.05
Third, Renault (C. L. Basie).....2:58:42.95
Fourth, Renault (L. Basie).....3:12:41.87

Eleven cars entered the contest, but three earned were the only ones to finish within anything like normal time. The Marmon car, driven by Ray Harroun, completed the course long after the others had left the track.

Spectators generally were glad to applaud the victory of Diebrow, as he has had a great deal of ill luck in being compelled to withdraw from events in which he was entered. To-day his car, which previously had developed unexpected defects, behaved like another machine and did not stop once throughout the entire contest.

Up to the one hundred and sixty-second mile George Robertson, at the wheel of a Fiat "50," seemed a certain winner. He was three laps ahead of all other cars when he broke a chain and before he could resume he had lost fourteen miles. Diebrow had been following him and assured the lead followed by Charles Basie, in second position.

When Robertson resumed he quickly overtook Basie, but the most brilliant kind of driving which he exhibited and the perfect response of his car were insufficient in the time remaining to overcome Diebrow's lead, although Robertson drove from thirteen to fifteen seconds per mile faster than the Rambler man. Although he was four laps behind Diebrow when he was approached, and although he was two in the rear when the Rambler pilot crossed the wire.

Diebrow's Challenger-Detroit held third position at the twenty-sixth mile, when he lost a flat tire and on the next lap the fifty-eighth mile Strang, like Robertson, driving a Fiat "50," changed tires and dropped to the rear, relinquishing third place to Harroun, in the Marmon. On the one hundred and twentieth mile he was in with a flat tire and on the next lap withdrew to the paddock.

The sixty-second mile saw the last of the Challenger-Detroit entries when Lordner had engine troubles and joined the crowd. Harroun, in the Marmon, was seriously delayed at the pit as the century mark was approached, and although he did not go to the paddock lost so much time that he ceased to be a contender. Sullivan, another Marmon driver, retired considerably earlier in the race with wheel trouble. Hugh Harbin was a contender up to the one hundred and twenty-second mile, when a brakeage compelled him to leave the race.

Chevrolet, the Buick driver, followed at Robertson's heels for eighty-six miles, when an overheated engine compelled him to withdraw.

St. Mary's Beats Hanover.

Lebanon, Ky., Nov. 14.—(Special.)—In the fiercest gridiron battle ever witnessed on a local field, St. Mary's College this afternoon defeated Hanover College, of Hanover, Ind., by the score of 6 to 0.

The teams were evenly matched, and during the first half neither side was able to score. The greater part of the play during the half was done by St. Mary's, who played much better football. McDonald, by a beautiful run, carried the ball over the line for a touchdown and then kicked goal. The visitors were hard to even up matters, but were never able to do so. Play was called with the ball in the hands of the field.

For Hanover, Craven, the diminutive halfback, and Capt. Allison were the star players, while Simms, McDonald and Decker did the best work for the home team.

ODD GEOGRAPHICAL FACTS.

(Boston Globe.)

The following collection of geographical peculiarities about the United States and places therein embodies certain unique points well worth remembering.

A novel way to demonstrate the enormous size of the State of Texas is to spread out a map of the United States and stretch a string across Texas the longest way. Then placing one end of the string in Chicago, one will find that the other end will extend into either the Atlantic Ocean or the Gulf of Mexico.

The two largest counties in the United States are Chisago county, Minnesota, and San Bernardino county, California. Each of these is a little more than 20,000 square miles in extent, and the States of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Delaware and New Jersey could be put inside the boundaries of either of them.

The smallest county in the United States is Bristol county, Rhode Island, which has only twenty-five square miles.

The county in the United States having the largest population is New York, which has more than 2,000,000 people in it. At the time of the last census Dalley county, Texas, which is about the size of the State of Rhode Island, had only four inhabitants.

About fifty miles from Durango, Colo., there is a point where four States meet. Here by stepping a few feet in either direction one can walk in four different Commonwealths in only a few seconds.

Vanderbilt made desperate efforts to score, but failed. This half was a succession of punts and line bucks. The ball was alternately in Vanderbilt's and Ohio's hands, but neither side was able to score until just at the end of the first half with about two minutes to play, when Jones by a forward pass to Hatfield succeeded in making a touchdown. Capt. Jones kicked out, but failed. This was thirty-two and one-half minutes after play had begun. In this half Neely made a sensational dash around State's left end for 25 yards. Hall, for State, also made a sensational run of 40 yards to Vanderbilt's 15-yard line, Griffin saving the day by downing him just at the right moment. In the second half both State and

These Commonwealths are the States of Colorado and Utah and the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona.

A nearly parallel case to that of Harpers Ferry, where the train stops a few minutes to allow the passengers to alight and enjoy a view which permits them to look into three States—Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

The highest and lowest elevations in this country are in California, within 100 miles of each other. The highest is Mt. Whitney, 14,995 feet high, and the lowest is Death Valley, about 450 feet below the level of the sea.

Two oceans pass in Yellowstone Park, so named because whenever there is a shower in the vicinity and a certain small creek overflows, its waters spread out over the edge of the continental divide and pass into tributaries of rivers which flow to the Atlantic and to the Pacific.

The longest city street in the United States is Western avenue, Chicago, which is exactly twenty-two miles long. Its nearest rival is Halsted street, also in Chicago, which is two-thirds of a mile shorter.

PLANT CLOSES DOWN.

Warrior's Troubles Cause Mutual Mining Company To Close Operations.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 13.—(Special.)—Following upon the announcement of the alleged defalcation of the funds of the Big Four railroad by Charles L. Warriner, treasurer at Cincinnati, the Mutual Mining Company has closed down its big plant at Kinsinger, this county, until Warriner's affairs are cleared up.

The Mutual Mining Company, which is a $100,000 investment in the local enterprise and was one of the managing directors, was also treasurer of the mining company, and each two weeks checks for the payroll were made out by General Manager Kinsinger at the headquarters of the company at Cincinnati, being returned to the plant here for distribution to the employees signed by Warriner.

The first intimation of Warriner's financial troubles became known in Cincinnati last Monday when the Mutual Mining Company was closed down. Since he has come back he has said that it is the intention to start up the mining operations again as soon as the status of Warriner's affairs can be determined.

About fifty men, all earning good salaries, are affected by the closing of the plant at Kinsinger. The mining of lead and products of chemicals from the plant is said to have been installed at an excess of $100,000. About $100,000 worth of chemicals for which there is no market here are said to be stored at the big establishment, while constant shipment has been made to the Frankfort and Cincinnati railroads of other products which are always in demand.

MYSTERIOUS VISITS PAID MORAN HOME.

UNKNOWN PERSON SAYS HE WANTS MONEY.

Probably the most mysterious case of blackmailing ever brought to light in the city of Louisville is the efforts of a criminal to secure money from Martin Moran, 171 Edmond avenue.

For more than a month the Moran home has received a nightly visit from the culprit, and the members of the family are afraid to even leave the house at night, for fear that they may be killed. On one occasion the house was entered and ransacked from top to bottom in a search for money. When none was found an article of value was snatched and a note was left the next morning explaining that only money was sought, and that the visits would be continued until it was received. The promise has been made good, and the family has been uneasy since.

The police and detectives were notified immediately after the first visit, but as yet they have no clue to the offender. The time they were notified the police was the enigmatical subject and very little attention was paid to the matter. One night about three weeks ago the police of the Highland subdivision were called shortly after a knock had been heard at a side window of the Moran home. They responded and made a thorough search of the premises, but when the would-be robber was not found the attention was turned to the matter. The visits continued and the family still found the knocking began and the next morning a note was captured which threatened the life of the family if the money was not paid. The note said: "I saw your great detective waiting for me last night, but he is too slow. I am sicker than any of them and they

The first report that became circulated in Cairo and Paducah was that the negroes were burning Cairo. Thousands of people rushed to the scene of the fire and many were armed. The mill proper, which is located a few feet from the warehouse, was saved by a fortunate shift of the wind, which turned toward the plant of the Consolidated Grain and Hay Company. The firemen directed their attention to this building and saved it. Several bales of cotton were ignited, but the flames were quenched with but small loss.

Cincinnati, Nov. 13.—Mrs. Jeannette Ford or Stewart, who is supposed to have important information bearing on the alleged $643,000 defalcation of Charles L. Warriner, former treasurer of the Big Four railroad, in an interview to-day made the startling statement that Warriner never stole a cent from the railroad.

"I don't believe Charlie Warriner ever stole a cent of money from the Big Four," said Mrs. Ford. "I know what I know and at the proper time will make everything public. I have letters which will explain everything and I am prepared to lay them before the grand jury."

SECRETARY MACVEIGH PROMISES HOUSE CLEANING.

SUGAR TRUST SWINDLES BRING QUICK ACTION.

TO REORGANIZE INSPECTORS.

Prosecutor Alters Plans.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Secretary of the Treasury MacVeigh has come out with the statement that not only will he probe to the bottom the scandal growing out of the fraud committed in the New York customs house by the so-called sugar trust and its agents, but he proposes to renovate the entire service. He declares he will shoulder all the responsibility for such a campaign, and that the investigation will be thorough and vigorous.

It has developed also that the Department of Justice is working in conjunction with the Treasury Department. Attorney General Wickham has been gathering evidence through his corps of special agents and the evidence is being worked up by the legal experts.

Secretary MacVeigh, however, indicates that he is going further than mere seeking to discover and punish those who have been guilty in past wrong doing. It is understood to be his purpose to reorganize the force of inspectors who kept close check on the general force in past years. These inspectors will be recruited with tried and trusted men, familiar with the workings of the customs house and they will be shifted from place to place. The report sets forth that the sugar trust actually owes the Government $30,000,000 instead of $1,125,000 in unpaid duties, and which it paid under duress. The Treasury officials declare it is absurd. The same officials point out that a most careful examination of the books of the New York customs house was made, and that every cent due the Government was accounted for.

STAL VALUABLE PAPERS.

Data Relating To Sugar Frauds Missing From Desk.

New York, Nov. 13.—It became known at the Federal building to-day that six days of racing which will take place at that course the present fall meeting. As originally scheduled, the meeting was to have closed on November 6, but on account of the Eastern season having closed by that date, and the Southern and Western winter meetings not being scheduled to open before November 20, the Latonia management decided on an extension of twelve racing days, with the exception of the two days engaged by the aviators. This extension was greatly appreciated by the many owners and turf followers now participating in the games at the Middle course, as it affords them favorable opportunities to increase their worldly possessions, and to keep them busy during an interim that otherwise would have hung heavily on their hands.

The card presented for to-morrow's entertainment is above the average as given to Western turf patrons during the winter season, and consists of six wagers. The fifth stands as the feature and brings out nine performers of considerable class, Nimbus, which has recently arrived at Latonia from the East, carries top weight and will likely win the race.

The "slate men." This good sprinter has won several nice races the past season, and if in good condition will receive heavy support. Hyperion II. and Law, who have raced nicely in the recent efforts and will furnish the competition, with fair racing luck and competent riders.

NATURALISTS' COLLECTION.

Maj. Meane and J. A. Loring Arrive at Nairobi.

Nairobi, British East Africa, Nov. 13.—Maj. Meane and J. A. Loring, the naturalists, have arrived here with splendid collections of photographs, birds and mammals. Both men are in excellent health. In his climb of Mount Kenya, Loring reached an altitude of 16,500 feet. He will go to Lucania Hill Monday. Maj. Meane will remain here to pack the specimens for shipment to America.

THOUSANDS RUSH TO CAIRO FIRE.

REPORT NEGROES WERE BURNING THE CITY BRINGS OUT ARMED CITIZENS.

Paducah, Ky., Nov. 13.—(Special.)—As a climax to the most exciting week that Cairo, Ill., the neighboring city of Paducah, has ever experienced, that city to-night had a $50,000 fire, the warehouse of the Roberts Cotton Seed Oil Company, of Memphis, which operates a mammoth plant at Cairo, being destroyed.

The first report that became circulated in Cairo and Paducah was that the negroes were burning Cairo. Thousands of people rushed to the scene of the fire and many were armed. The mill proper, which is located a few feet from the warehouse, was saved by a fortunate shift of the wind, which turned toward the plant of the Consolidated Grain and Hay Company. The firemen directed their attention to this building and saved it. Several bales of cotton were ignited, but the flames were quenched with but small loss.
